FOLKLORE OF THE KONKAN

CHAPTER I

NATURE POWERS

THE worship of minor local deities is connected with such low castes as Guravas Bhopis Mirálá Kanbis, Dhingars Waghies, Murlis Mahars and Mangs in the District of Kolhapur. It is believed by the Brahmans that once an image is consecrated and worshipped, it should be worshipped uninterruptedly every day, and he who neglects to worship such an image daily incurs the sin of Brahma hatya or Brahman murder. For this reason Brahmans generally do not worship minor local deities. In former times Brahmans who worshipped these deities were excommunicated by their caste men. Such Pujaris were compelled to wear a folded dhotor or waist cloth, and were forbidden to put on the gandh or sandal paste mark in straight or cross lines. They were allowed to put on the tika or circular mark of sandal paste. Another reason why Brahmans are not the Pujaris or worshippers of such deities is that Brahmans cannot accept or partake of the Naistika offering of cooked food, fowl, etc. made to them. Lower class people can partake of such offerings, and are therefore generally the worshippers or ministrants of minor local deities.

At Palshet in the Ratnagiri District, there are two gramdetis, viz., Jholi, and Mhárjá, and the pujaris of these deities are respectively a Gurav and a Mahar.¹ The pujaris of goddesses are generally men of the lower castes. The guardian goddesses of the villages of Pule, Varavade, Nandivade, and Rula have Kanbis as their pujaris, while the pujaris of the goddesses Maháleshvari, Bhagvati, Mubakali, and Jogini are generally chosen from the Gurav caste.² In the Konkan the Ráults (Shudras) are the pujaris of the deities Vitloba, Ravalnáth and Bhavani, the Ghádis are the pujaris of the deities Sateri and Khavaneswar, while the deities Mahadev and Varuti are worshipped by pujaris belonging to the Gurav caste.³ The goddesses Mahabai and Jakhmá at Sangmeshwar in the Ratnagiri District are worshipped by pujaris who belong to the Gurav and Bhoi castes respectively. The god Ganpati at Makhale has for his pujari a Wani. The pujaris of the temple of Shiva at Jánje in the Ratnagiri District are Wanis.⁴ It is said that the pujari of Pandarik at Pandharpur is a Kavata (fisherman) by caste.⁵

The pujari of the goddess Narmata at Sidgaon in the Thana District is a Koli, whilst the pujaris of Kánoba, Khandoba, and Vitál are of the lower castes.⁶ The goddesses Maháleshvari of Kolvan and Vajreshvari have their pujaris chosen from the lower castes.⁷ The pujaris of Jari Mari, Mhárjá, Bahiroba Cheda and other deities which are said to prevent contagious diseases are always men of the lower castes.⁸

guardian goddesses of Chaul in the Kolába District belongs to the lower castes.¹ The goddess Mángái has always a Mahár as her pújári.² Everyday the god Shiva is required to be worshipped first by a pújári of the Gurav caste. The pújári of Bahiri, a corruption of the word Bhairav, one of the manifestations of Shiva, is a man belonging to the lower castes. Similarly the pújáris of Bhagavati, Bhaváni, Ambika, Kálíka, Jákhái, Jholái, Janni, Kolhái, Vadyájái, Shitaládevi, Chandika, etc., are persons belonging to lower castes.³

It is considered by the Hindus very meritorious and holy to worship the Sun; and by Bráhmans the Sun is considered to be their chief deity. The Gáyatri Mantra of the Bráhmans is a prayer to the Sun-god or the Savita Dev, and the Bráhmans offer arghya or oblations of water to the Sun thrice a day. Those who want health, wealth and prosperity propitiate the Sun-god by prayers and ceremonies. The Ratha Saptami is considered to be the principal day for special worship and festivities in honour of the Sun-god. On this day, on a low wooden stool, is drawn, in red sandal paste, a figure of the Sun in human shape seated in a chariot drawn by seven horses, or by a horse with seven faces. This figure is then placed in the sun-shine, and it is then worshipped by offering it arghya or spoonfuls of water, red powder, red flowers mixed with red sandal paste, camphor, incense and fruits. Some people kneel down while offering the arghyas to the Sun. These arghyas are either three or twelve in number. Some persons make a vow not to eat anything unless they have worshipped the Sun and performed the twelve Namaskaras by falling prostrate and bowing with folded hands twelve times, and at each time repeating one of the twelve names of the Sun.*

In the Ratnágiri District some people worship the Sun on the Sundays of the month of Shrávan. A ceremony held on the Rathasaptami day, i.e., the 7th day of the bright half of Mágh, is deemed a special festival in honour of the Sun-god. On that day people draw, on a small wooden stool, an image of the Sun, seated in a chariot drawn by seven horses, and worship it with great reverence. Milk is then boiled on a fire made of cow-dung cakes in front of the household Tulsi plant. If the milk overflows to the east, it is believed that there will be abundance of crops, but if it flows to the west it is taken as a sign of the near approach of famine.⁴ The Sun-god is also worshipped on the following occasions, e.g., Trikal, Gajaccháyá, 'Ardhodaya, Mahodaya, Pyatipát, Makar-Sankránt, Kark-Sankránt and the Solar eclipse.⁵ Though there are few temples dedicated to the Sun, the village of Parule has the honour of having one called "the temple of Adi-Naráyan." Non-Bráhmanical classes are not seen worshipping the Sun in this district, despite the fact that the Sun is said to be the embodiment of the three principal deities of the Hindus.⁶

The people of the Thána District believe that the Swastika is the central point of the helmet of the Sun, and a vow called the Swastika Vrata is held in its honor. A woman who observes this vow, draws a figure of the Swastika and worships it daily during the Cháturmás (four months of the rainy season), at the expiration of which she gives a Bráhman a golden or silver plate with the sign of the Swastika upon it.⁷ Another vow named Dhanurmás, common to all districts in the Konkan, requires a person to complete his daily rites before sun-rise, and to offer a preparation of food called khachad to the Sun god. The observer of this vow then partakes of the food regarding it as a gift from that god. This is either done for one day or repeated for a month till the Dhanu-Sankranti. On the Somaatima day (the 15th day of the dark half of a month falling on Monday) and the Kapladharth day the Sun is held in special reverence. A curious story is narrated regarding the offering of Arghya to the Sun. It is said that the Sun rejoices at the birth of a Brahman and gives 1,000,000 cows in charity believing that the Arghya which the Brahman will offer later on will devour its focus one drop of the Arghya killing 1,000 of them. The repetition of the Gayatri mantra 108 times a day is supposed to release a Brahman from the debt of 1,000,000 cows owed in this way to the Sun. The Yoga-Sutras of Patanjali however prohibit a man from looking at the setting Sun though the sin thus incurred is made amends for by the offering of Arghya to that god. It is interesting to note that women do not grind corn on the Ratha-Saptami day.

Women bow down to the Sun on the 11th, 12th, 30th or 40th day after their delivery but Kunb women generally worship that god on the 7th day. On this occasion some women show a clurning handlet to the Sun god and offer him some grains of rice.

The Swastika is considered so holy in the Konkan that it is always drawn on the Antarpat and at the time of the Pungah Waelan ceremony which precedes a Hindu wedding a Swastika drawn in rice is worshipped. The principal deities of the Hindus whenever they are invoked on special occasions are seated on the Swastika. The people of the Ratnagiri District worship the Swastika regarding it as the symbol as well as the seat of the Sun god.

By some the Swastika is regarded as the foundaton stone of the universe and is held to be the symbol of the god Brahma and not of the Sun.

The conception of Kunb is said to have taken place by the influence of the rays of the Sun.

The Swastika is considered as an emblem of peace and prosperity and for this reason Brahman women draw a figure of the Swastika in front of their houses. The custom of moving round such sacred objects as the Dhanyan the Patal the Tula or sweet basil plant the Umburth Arka (Himalayan emblem) etc. is prevalent in the district of Kolhapur. There are no cases recorded in which women after childbirth are exposed to the Sun. But on the 12th day after delivery the mother puts on new bangles and new clothes, coconuts, betel nuts and leaves, grains of rice, plants and grains of wheat are placed near her. She then comes out and bows to the Sun. Wealthy persons on this occasion perform a Homa over fire in the houses by kindling the holy fire and feeding Brahmins. No one is thought to be caused by exposure to the rays of the Sun.

The Hindu women of the Konkan walk round Patal, Tula and Umburth on Saturday and on the Somaatima day i.e. the 15th day of the dark half of a month when it falls on Monday. Young women make a vow to walk round temple or a sacred tree one-hundred thousand times; and for the fulfilment of this vow they walk round the temple or tree for about seven or eight hours every day. If they find it difficult to make up the number of rounds themselves, they ask their near relations to assist them in their undertaking.¹

The Moon is worshipped by the Hindus on the 2nd of the bright half of every month. On this day it is considered very lucky to see the moon, and many people, particularly the lower classes, pull out threads from the clothes they wear, and offer them to the moon, saying "O! God, accept these old clothes of ours and be pleased to give us new ones in their stead." Some people worship the moon on the Sankasti Chaturthi 4th day of the dark half of every month; and such people will not eat anything until they have seen and worshipped the moon on that day. The moon is not worshipped on the Ganesh Chaturthi day that is, the 4th of the bright half of the month of Bhādrapad, as it is considered very unlucky to see the moon on that night. It is firmly believed that any one who sees the moon on the Ganesh Chaturthi day even by accident will be falsely accused of theft or some other crime. In order to avoid this, people who have accidentally seen the moon, throw stones at the houses of their neighbours, and if the neighbours abuse them in return, the mischiefmakers consider themselves freed by the abuse from the sin of having looked at the moon on a forbidden night.

The spots on the surface of the moon are believed by some to be the rath or chariot of the god. Others think that they are lunar mountains; but many believe that the spots are the visible signs of the stain on the character of the moon-god due to his having outraged the modesty of the wife of his guru, the god Brahaspati or Jupiter. In the Purāns it is stated that on one occasion, a dispute arose between the moon and Brahaspati or Jupiter about the wife of Brahaspati, each of them claiming to be the cause of her conception. Subsequently a son was born who was named Budha (Mercury). Brahaspati's wife, on being asked who was the father of the child, named the moon. Thereupon Brahaspati cursed the moon for his adultery. The spots on the surface of the moon are said to be the effect of this curse.

The moon-god is believed to distribute nectar through his rays, and therefore this deity is said to have the power of removing diseases and restoring human beings to health. The moon is the king of herbs, and all trees, plants, etc., thrive owing to the influence of the moon. Sometimes people place at night, figs, plantains, sugarcane and other eatables in the moonlight and eat them early in the morning; and it is said that those who do so improve in health. The practice of drinking the moon's rays does not prevail in the Kolhāpur district. But people occasionally dine in the moon light.²

On a full moon day people perform the special worship of their chosen deity. On the full moon of the month of Kārtika temples are illuminated, and on the full moon day of Māgha, raw corn such as wheat, bājri, etc., is cooked and offered to the household and other deities.³ On this day are also performed the special rites and ceremonies that are required in connection with the Kula-devatās or family gods or goddesses. On the full moon day of Fālguna the Holi fire is kindled and worshipped. In certain families the full moon of Chaitra is considered auspicious for making offerings to family deities. On the full moon day of Shrāvan is observed the feast of Cocoanut day, and on this day Brāhmins put on new sacred threads. The full moon is considered by the Sanyāsīs or ascetics an auspicious day for shaving their heads.

* In the Konkan the Navānna Purnima or full moon day of new food is observed in the month of Ashvina. This is, no doubt, due to the difference in the season of the harvest.

On the new moon day the Puras or Manes are worshipped. Lighted lamps are worshipped on the new moon day of Ashvini. In the Kolhapur State this is called Tadal new moon day and in the Konkan it is called Datal new moon day. On the new moon day of Ashvini Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, is worshipped. All social ceremonies for the progeny take place on the new moon day. The Dattya or 2nd day of every month is considered sacred to the moon and on this day the moon is worshipped while the Chaturthi is considered sacred to the god Ganapati and on the Chaturthi of Bladrapada a special festival is held in honour of the god Ganpati.

On the 15th day of the bright half of the month of Ashvini people put milk in the rays of the moon for some time and then drink milk in this way they drink it in the rays of the moon. On the Sankranti Chaturthi day and on that Chaturthi which immediately follows the Dasara holiday people draw an image of the moon and several conflicting theories are held regarding the spots on the surface of the moon. Some believe that the spot observed on the moon is a tamarind tree in which the god has stationed himself. Others hold that the spot is the reflection of a deer which is joked to the chariot of the moon while in my more belief that it has been occasioned by the hoof of the horse of King Nala. Some say that the spot on the surface of the moon represents a Patal tree and a cow fastened to the roots of the tree. Others on the authority of Hindu mythology suppose that God created Madan (cupid) from the essence taken from the body of the moon and hence the moon god has spots on his body. In the Mahabharata it is stated that on the surface of the moon is reflected the island of Sudarshana on the earth together with some trees and a great high bright part being nothing but water. The spot on the surface of the moon is considered by some as a deer which the god has taken on his lap. Some believe that Yasoda, the mother of Krishna, after washing an earthen dish round the face of Krishna threw it at the sky. It struck the moon and thereby the spots on the surface of the moon were caused. Nectar is supposed to have been derived from the rays of the moon and some sacred books state that the Chakras Varid (Bartar) Partridge drinks the rays of the moon.

The people of the Khanna District hold a similar notion regarding the spots on the surface of the moon. It has been said by some that the port on a quest on requests mud while others say that the moon has been disfigured owing to a curse from a sage. Some people say that the spots are due to the moon being cursed by his preceptor Brahmapati with whose wife the moon god had connected. Being unable to bear the pain of the spots the moon god propitiated his preceptor who directed him to bathe in the Blumarver to alleviate the agony. Accordingly the pain was assuaged and the part of the river where the Moon god bathed thus came to be called Chandra bhaga. Some persons suggest that the spots are a Patal tree with two deer feeding upon it from two sides. Others hold that the spots on the surface of the moon are due to its having been kicked by a deer which when pursued by a hunter was refused shelter.

The people of the Thána District believe that the rays of the moon influence conception.¹

In the Kolába District, to sit in an open place on a moon-light night, is regarded as drinking the rays of the moon.² The elongated part of the orb of the moon pointing towards the north or the south is supposed to forebode scarcity or abundance, respectively.³

It is a common belief that the moon should not be seen on the Ganesh Chaturthi day, i.e., the 4th day of the bright half of Bhādrapad.

Looking at the moon continuously for a short time on every moon light night is said to keep one's sight in good order.⁴

If the Amāśya falls on Monday, Brāhman women of the Thána District walk round a Tulsi plant or a Pipal tree and make a vow to a Brāhman.⁵

In the Kolába District a special ceremony is held in honour of minor goddesses on the 8th day of a month. The following things are avoided one on each of the fifteen tithis respectively. —

Kohala (pumpkin) dorli (Solanum indicum), salt, sesamum, sour things, oil, ārale (Emblie myroblum), cocoanuts, bhopala (gourd), padal (snake-gourd), pāte (Dolichos Lablab) masur (Lens esculenta) brinjil, honey, gambling.⁶

The people observe a fast on the 13th (Pradosha) and the 14th day (Shivarātra) of the dark half of every month.⁷ On the 15th day of the bright half of Chaitra, a fair is held in honour of the guardian deity of a village, and hens, goats, etc., are offered as a sacrifice.⁸

The following are days of special importance.

Gudhi-pādā, i.e., the first day of the bright half of Chaitra:—This being the first day of the year, gudhis and toranas are hoisted in front of every house and are worshipped.⁹

Bhāu-bij:—On the 2nd day of the bright half of Kārtik every sister waves round the face of her brother a lamp, and makes him a present.¹⁰

The ceremony on the Bhāu-bij day has come into vogue on account of Subhadrā having given a very pleasant bath to her brother Krishna on that day. The Court of Yama is also said to be closed on that day, since he goes to his sister; and consequently persons who die on that day, however sinful they may be, are not supposed to go to Yamaloka i. e., hell.¹¹

Akshya Tṛitiya:—On the third day of the bright half of Vaiśākh cold water and winnowing fans are distributed as tokens for appeasing the Manes of ancestors. On this day is also celebrated the birth of the god Parashurām.¹²

Ganesh Chaturthi:—On the 4th day of the bright half of Bhādrapad, an earthen image of Ganpati is worshipped and a great ceremony is held in his honour.¹³ The fourth day of the bright half of every month is called Vināyaka-Chaturthi; while that of the dark half is called Sankasti-Chaturthi. On the Vināyaka-Chaturthi day, people fast the whole day and dine the next day; while on the Sankasti Chaturthi day, they fast during the day time and dine after moon-rise.¹⁴ That Sankasti Chaturthi which falls on Tuesday is considered the best.¹⁵

Bhādrapada.¹ These Sapta-rishis are said to have been created by the God Brahma from his own body; and teaching them the four Vedas, he handed them over to them and asked them to regulate the affairs of the world.²

Some people of the Ratnágiri District believe that the rain-bow is the bow used by Ráma, the hero of the Rámáyana. Its appearance on the east is regarded by them as symptomatic of the approach of rain, while its appearance on the west is equivalent to the departure of rain.³

The short duration of the rain-bow is held to indicate an excessive fall of rain while its long duration fortodes a scarcity of rain.⁴ The appearance of the rain-bow on a river is supposed to indicate the approach of rain, while its appearance on a mountain means the departure of rain.⁵ Of the two bows of which the rain-bow seems to be composed, the larger is believed to belong to Ráma, and the smaller to Lakshman.⁶ Since the God Indra is supposed to send rain, the Indradhanushya (the rain-bow) is regarded as a sign of the advent of rain.⁷

By some Hindus it is believed that the milky way is a heavenly river which is a favourite bathing place of the gods.⁸ Others suppose it to be a branch of the celestial Ganges which is said to have been brought down upon this earth by king Bhagiratha.⁹ Some persons, however, believe that since the great sage Agastya is said to reside at Rámeshwar in the southern direction, the Ganges (the milky way) runs through the sky to the south in order to bathe him.

Sometimes the milky way is believed to be a white cloud.¹⁰

On the authority of the Mahákála Nirván Tantra, some people of the Thána District believe that a person who cannot get a view of the polar star will die within six months; while others substitute the Arundhati star for the polar star and determine the duration of life of a diseased person by the same process.¹¹

The people of the Thána District believe that the rain-bow is caused by the accumulation of moisture in the air.¹² The rain-bow is said to consecrate the region over which it appears.¹³ The appearance of the rain-bow in the morning is supposed to forbode the approach of rain.¹⁴

Some people of the Kolába District believe that the holy persons such as Káshyapa, Arundhati and other sages, who lived on this earth in ancient times are seen shining in the sky by the sacred lustre of their powers.¹⁵ Hindu women worship the planets Budha and Guru (Mercury and Jupiter) in the month of Shravan.¹⁶

The Sapta-rishis are somewhere called Khatale and Bájale (cot).¹⁷ The rain-bow is held by some to be the symbol of Ráma and Lakshman, who visit the world in that form with the view of watching its proceedings. Others, however, believe that it represents God Indra who assumes that form to see how his orders are executed by his subordinates.¹⁸ The rain-bow is said to foretell good if it appears either at the beginning or end of the rainy season, while its appearance at any other time is supposed to forbode evil.¹⁹

Hindus regard the earth as one of the most important deities and worship it on various occasions. It is enjoined upon Brahmans to worship it daily at the time of the Sandhyarite as well as while performing the Shikhar ceremony.¹ The people of the Ratnagiri District pray to the earth as soon as they leave their bed in the morning.² The earth is required to be worshipped at the time of laying the foundation stone of a house as well as at the time of bringing into use a newly built house.³ Hence it is held unlawful to sleep on the bare ground; those whose parents die sleep on a woollen cloth on the ground till the parents' anniversary is over.⁴ Wanprastha Sanyās and Brahmans are required to sleep on the ground.⁵ Some persons men sleep on the bare ground during the Caturmas (the four months of the rainy season) at the expiry of which they present a bed to a Brahman.⁶ It is enjoined upon a prince to sleep on the bare ground on the eve of the coronation day.⁷

Widows and women are required to sleep on the ground during their monthly courses. Women whose husbands are away are also to do the same.⁸ In the Ratnagiri District Kaika is on the day on which they wish to be possessed by a particular deity or spirit are required to sleep on the earth.⁹ When people are on the point of death they are made to lie on blades of darbha grass placed on the earth.¹⁰ The performer of a sacrifice as well as one who has observed a vow are to sleep on the ground.¹¹ The following articles should not be allowed to touch the earth: pearls, the Shikhar gram stone an image of the god Vishnu, the linga of Shiva, a conchshell, the sacred thread of a Brahman, flowers intended for worship, basil leaves and Govardan.¹²

The following lines are repeated in the morning before setting foot to the ground.¹³—

O Goddess! who is clothed (surrounded) by the sea whose breasts are mountains and who is the wife of Vishnu I bow down to thee. Please forgive the touch of my feet. O Goddess Earth! who art born by the power of Vishnu whose surface is of the colour of a conch shell and who art the store house of innumerable jewels I bow down to thee.

Some women of the Tlana District worship the earth daily during the Chaturmas (four months of the rainy season) at the end of which they give a Brahman a piece of land or the money equivalent of it.¹⁴ Persons who perform a particular rite e.g. the Solas na atras (a person observed on sixteen successive Mondays) are required to sleep on the bare ground.¹⁵ At the sowing and harvest time farmers appease the earth by offering betanuts, coconuts, fowls, rice mixed with curries etc. The blood of a kug and the balls of rice given to the manes of the dead are not allowed to touch the ground. People convey to Aditya the place the water of the Ganges without placing it on the ground.¹⁶

The earth is required to be worshipped before taking a portion of it for sacrificial purposes.¹⁷ A vessel containing water over which merit has been repeated is not allowed to touch the ground.¹⁸ On the 13th day of the bright half of Asvina every farmer prepares some sweetmeats in his house and takes them to his farm. There he gathers five stones, worships them, and offers the sweetmeats to the earth. Afterwards he takes a portion of the food and scatters it over the farm. His family then gather there and take a hearty meal. In the evening the person who carried the food to the farm, picks up some grains of barley and puts them into a basket. On return home the grains are thrown over the house.¹

Various conflicting notions are entertained regarding thunder and lightning. The people of the Ratnágiri District believe that the clouds are animals that roar. When these animals emit water it bursts forth on account of the circular motion of the winds called Chanda and Munda. This bursting is supposed to produce thunder and lightning.² Somewhere thunder and lightning are said to be the signals given by the god Indra, to birds, beasts, etc., of the setting in of the rainy season.³ Some people believe that the god Indra sends rain through his elephants who, being excited, make a noise like thunder.⁴

Others regard the thunder as the roaring of the elephant of the gods, while sucking seawater. The thunder is also believed to be the roaring of the god Varuna, the king of the clouds.⁵ The boys of the Ratnágiri District believe that thunder is a sign of the wedding ceremonies performed in the heavenly houses of the gods.⁶ Some Mahomedans believe that an angel called Mekail has control over the rain. To cause a fall of rain Mekail strikes the clouds with a whip of lightning. The clouds then utter a cry, and this is the cause of thunder.⁷ Some people of the Thána District believe that there are big stones in the sky which strike against each other owing to the force of the wind, and produce thunder. The dashing of these stones against each other also generates lightning.⁸

In the Kolába District it is believed that thunder is the military band of the king of clouds and lightning is his banner.⁹ Lightning is said to be produced by the fighting of celestial elephants; while thunder is heard when they pour out water.¹⁰ Some people think that thunder is the noise of the feet of the elephants (clouds) that give rain; lightning is also said to be generated from their foot fall.¹¹ The clouds are supposed to be the messengers of gods, lightning being the manifestation of Divine power. The gods are said to confine these messengers from the nakshatra of Ardra to the nakshatra of Hasti, in which latter nakshatra they again begin to roar.¹²

Thunder is supposed to take place when the god Indra draws his bow; while lightning is said to be produced when the same god strikes his adamant against a mountain.¹³

In the Ratnágiri District it is believed that earthquake occurs whenever the thousand headed Shesha shakes its head.¹⁴ It is said that at one time a demon named Gayásur became very troublesome, and all the gods held him down by standing on his body. Thereupon the demon requested all the gods to remain on his body for ever. Occasionally this Gayásur shakes his body and this causes the earthquake.¹⁵ Some people believe that the earth trembles of its own accord when sins accumulate upon it.¹⁶ Others hold that the earthquake takes place in the hollow parts of the earth.¹⁷ Some people, however, believe that since the earth floats upon water, it naturally quakes at times.¹⁸

The Hindus being element worshippers naturally hold in reverence certain rivers, ponds, etc. In the Ratnágiri District the spring at Rájápur, called the Rajapurchi Ganga is considered very sacred. It flows from the roots of a Banyan tree. There are fifteen Kundas or ponds, and the principal Kunda always remains filled with water. On occasions a big jatra fair is held and people from distant places come to bathe and worship at the spring.¹ Some people believe that many of the lakes, springs, etc., situated in the Kolhapur State are sacred.² A spring or rivulet that flows to the east is considered specially sacred. It is called a Surya-Kansi spring, and it is considered meritorious to bathe in it.³ In the village of Kankuli in the Ratnágiri District if a person is bitten by a snake or other poisonous reptile, no medicine is administered to him, but holy water brought from the temple of the village goddess is given to him to drink, and it is said that the patient is thus cured.⁴ The water fall at Maral near Devarkuha, where the river Don takes its rise, is held sacred.⁵ At Bhavani in the Ratnágiri District the people use the tirtha of a deity as medicine for diseases due to poison. They say that it is the sole remedy they apply in such cases.⁶ There are ponds at Manora in the Goa State, and Vetore in the Savantwadi State, the water of which is used as medicine for the cure of persons suffering from the poison of snakes, mice, spiders, and scorpions.⁷ When a well is dug, the people call a Brahman priest to consecrate it. The Brahman takes cow's urine, milk, curds, ghee, sandal paste, flowers, basil leaves, and rice, and mixes them with water, and after repeating sacred mantras over the water, throws the mixture into the well. After this ceremony, the people are at liberty to drink water from the well.⁸

Before a well is dug, an expert is consulted to ascertain the place where a spring flows. A well is then dug, after offering a sacrifice to the spirits and deities that happen to dwell at that spot. A dinner is given to Brahmins after the well is built.⁹ A golden cow is often thrown into a newly built well as an offering to the water deities.¹⁰ There is a well at Mandangad, the water of which serves as medicine to cure the poison of snakes and other reptiles.¹¹

It is believed that there is a class of wicked water nymphs called Asura who generally dwell in wells, ponds or rivers, far from the habitation of men. Whenever these nymphs come across a lonely man or woman entering a well, pond, etc., they carry that person under water. The village of Mith-Bár in the Ratnágiri District is a well-known resort of these Asuras, and many instances are given by the villagers of persons being drowned and carried off in the river by these wicked nymphs. A tank in the village of Hindalem in the same district has a similar reputation.¹² The people of the Konkan believe that water nymphs are sometimes seen in the form of women near wells, rivers, and ponds.¹³ Some say that the water nymphs and water spirits confer objects desired by worshippers if they are propitiated by prayers.¹⁴

There are seven kundas, ponds, at Nirmal in the Thána District, forming a large lake. This lake is said to have been formed from the blood of the demon Vimalásur. At Sháhápúr there is a holy spring of hot water under a Pipal tree. It is called Ganga.¹ There are kundas, pools, of hot water in the Faitarna river in the Thána District, in which people bathe on the 13th day of the dark half of Chaitra.² There are also springs of hot water on the bank of the Surya river at Vajreshvari and at Koknere, in the Thána District.³ A handful of corn, if thrown into the hot water kundas at Tungar, is said to be boiled at once.⁴ It is held holy to bathe in the kundas, of hot water that are situated in the rivers Tansa and Bánganga in the Thána District.⁵ The water of a well which is drawn without touching the earth or without being placed upon the ground is given as medicine for indigestion. Similarly the water of seven tanks, or at least of one pond, in which lotuses grow is said to check the virulence of measles, small-pox, etc.⁶ A bath in a certain tank in the Mahim taluka is said to cure persons suffering from the itch, and water purified by repeating incantations over it is also said to be a good remedy for the same disease.⁷

The water of a tank or a well is supposed to be wholesome to a person of indifferent health, if given to him to drink without placing it upon the ground.⁸ Some people believe that the water of the Ganges is so holy and powerful that if bows are thrown into it they are instantly reduced to powder.⁹ The repair of lakes, caravansaries, temples, etc., is held more meritorious than their actual erection.¹⁰ It is enjoined upon a man to perform a certain rite if he wishes to relinquish his right of ownership over a well or tank, and after this rite is performed, it can be utilized for public purposes. But no ceremony is required to be performed if a well is dug for the benefit of the public.¹¹

The people of the Thána District believe that water nymphs reside in every reservoir of water.¹² Some people, however, believe that the water nymphs dwell in those lakes in which lotuses grow. These nymphs are said to do harm to children and young women, especially when they set out for a walk accompanied by their brother Gavala. They are unusually dangerous.¹³ The people worship the images of the following seven water nymphs or apsaras, viz., Mackhi, Kurmi, Karkati, Darduri, Jatupi, Somapa and Makari.¹⁴

The following places are said to be inhabited by water spirits;—the channel of Kalamba, the tanks of Sopara and Utaratal and the lake called Tambra-tirtha at Basscin.¹⁵ Water nymphs are supposed to drown a person who tries to save another fallen into water.¹⁶ A species of small men named Uda, otherwise called water-spirits, are said to dwell in water and subsist on fishes.¹⁷ The spirits called Khais and Mhashya are supposed to reside in water.¹⁸

The river Sávitrí in the Kolába District takes its rise near Mahábaleshwar and is considered very sacred. The following traditional account is given of its origin. The god Brahma had two wives, Sávitrí and Gáyatrí. A dispute having arisen between them, they both jumped over a precipice. Sávitrí assumed the form of a river and fell into the sea near Bánkot. Gáyatrí, on the other hand, concealed herself in the river Sávitrí and manifested herself as a spring near Hari-hareshwar in the Janjira State.¹⁹ A man is

A pond near Ahopoli in the Kolaba district is held very sacred. The following story is related in connection with it. The villagers say that the water nymphs in the pond used to provide pots for marriage festivities if a written application were made to them a day previous to the wedding. The pots were, however, required to be returned within a limited time. But one man having failed to comply with this condition, they have ceased to lend pots. Another interesting story is associated with the same pond. It is as follows. A man had fallen into the pond and was taken to the abode of the nymphs. He was, however, returned by them after a few days on the understanding that he would be recalled if he spoke of what he had seen there. One day he communicated to the people the good things that he enjoyed there and to the surprise of all he was found dead immediately after.⁴ Water nymphs are said to reside in a pond at Varsai in the Kolaba district. Consequently persons that are held unclean, e.g., women in their monthly course, etc., are not allowed to touch it. The nymphs of the same lake were once said to lend pots on festive occasions.⁵ It is said that the water nymphs used to provide ornaments for marriage and other ceremonies if returned within a prescribed period. But some people having failed to return them, they ceased to lend them.⁶

A spirit called Garba is supposed to reside in water. It is said to make mischief with man in a variety of ways by enticing him into deep water.⁷ The Jakrin is said to be a deity residing in water.⁸ Persons drowned in water are believed to become water-spirits and to trouble innocent passers by.⁹

A mountain near the village Pule in the district of Ratnagiri is held sacred on account of the residence of the god Ganpati at that place. For this reason people walk round the mountain and worship it. Tradition says that Ganpati was at first at Gule in the Ratnagiri district, but on account of the sanctity of the place being violated by some wicked persons the god transferred his residence to Pule. At Gule there is still a very beautiful temple of Ganpati though it is now in a dilapidated condition.¹⁰ The cave of the sage Mauh kund near Machal on the Sahyadri mountain is considered sacred. In the Konkan it is not held sinful to ascend a mountain or a hill, though to sit upon its summit is considered sinful.¹¹ The hill of Mirya near Ratnagiri is considered sacred. This hill is believed to be a partake (miri) of the mythological mountain Dronagiri.¹²

A hill near Dhérávi in the Thána District is consecrated by the temple of a goddess upon the top. This goddess is said to preserve ships at sea, and people are occasionally possessed by her. It is said that a Roman Catholic priest met instantaneous death on having insulted her.¹³

The hill of Mahálakshmi in the Dahanu taluka is held sacred. The villagers consider it dangerous to ascend this hill.¹⁴ On the hill of the same name is a temple of the goddess Jiyadhani, who is said to preserve children from small pox. The folk who

This hill is said to contain many medical herbs.¹ The hill at Kankeshwar near Alibag is held sacred and tradition says that in ancient times it had golden dust upon it.² A cave at Ambavali near Karjat in the Kolaba district consists of seven rooms one of which is spacious enough to accommodate five hundred persons. In the same taluk there is another cave at Kondhivani.³

The gods Indra and Varuna are supposed to send rain, but it is believed that the god Shiva in chief has the power of causing the fall of rain, and for this reason whenever there is a scarcity of rain people pour water over the linga of Shiva until the whole linga is submerged.⁴ In order that there should be a fall of rain, some people besmear the linga of the god Shiva with cooked rice and curds.⁵ In the Ratnagiri District, whenever there is a scarcity of rain, people go to the place known as Parashuram Kshetra, and there pray to the god Parashuram to send rain.⁶ Sacrifices are also offered to Indra, the god of rain, in order that there should be plenty of rain. Some believe that there are certain mantras or enchanters who by the power of their mantras are able to prevent the fall of rain.⁷

In the Ratnagiri District the following ceremony is performed by the lower castes such as Kumbhis, etc., to avert drought. All the male villagers assemble together at an appointed place, and there they select one of them as their Gowala-deva. All of them then go about in the village from house to house. The owner of every house sprinkles water over the assembly, and curds and butter milk over the body of the Gowala-deva. They are also given some sidha consisting of rice, pulses, vegetables, etc. After visiting most of the houses in the village, the assembly headed by the Gowala-deva go to the bank of a river. Here they cook the food offer it first to the Gowala-deva and then partake of the remainder as a prasada from the Gowala-deva.⁸ Some people make an image of the sage Shringarishi for the purpose of causing the fall of rain.⁹ Others make an image of Dhundi-deva in order that there should be plenty of rain.¹⁰ Sometimes people repeat mantras addressed to Parjanya (rain) so that rain should fall.¹¹ The goddess Nava-chandika is worshipped in order that there should be rain. The Kumbhis perform a peculiar rite for checking the fall of rain. They ask a person born in the months of Jyestha, Ashadh, Shravan or Uttarapad to fetch some rain-water in an alu leaf and this is fastened to the eaves of thatched houses by means of a string. Note that, if this rite is to be performed in the month of Jyestha, a person born in that month only is required and no other, and so forth.¹² In order to check an excessive fall of rain the villagers sometimes ask a boy to take off his clothes and then to catch rain-water in the leaves of the alu plant. The leaves containing the water are then tied to the eaves of the house.¹³ The people say that during the rule of the Peshwas there was a class of mantris who had the power of causing a failure of rain.¹⁴ To check the fall of rain, some people ask naked boys to throw burning

The rite of Rishi Panchami is performed on the 5th day of the bright half of Bhadrapad to make amends for sins committed without knowledge. On this day women go to a river, a well or some other sacred place, cleanse their teeth with the leaves of the Aghada plant, and take baths with something on the head. They then take some stones from that place and worship them as Rishis. On the conclusion of the worship, they partake of fruits. On the Vrate-Sacitri day women worship a banyan tree or its boughs. The ceremony falls on the 15th day of the bright half of Jyesta.¹ On the Haritalika day i.e. the 3rd day of the bright half of Bhadrapad, women make images of earth of Parvati and her two friends and worship them and fast the whole day. The observance of this rite contributes to their good fortune. Even girls of tender years observe this fast. The worship of Mangila Gauri is a ceremony performed by married girls for five successive years on every Tuesday of the month of Shravan. Similarly, the goddess Mahalakshmi is worshipped on the 8th day of the bright half of Ishrin. On the Makar Sankranti day women worship a suga!² and present it to a Brahman.³ The Sirva mutha consists of a handful of corn offered to the god Shiva by married girls on every Monday in the month of Shravan.⁴

The worship of Shravanandi and the Holika Devi and the ceremonies of Shravan, Shraddha and Antyesti are performed by men alone.⁵

In some families of non-Brahmins on a particular day, especially on the full moon day of Ishrin, the host and the hostess put off their clothes and perform certain family rites.⁶

The women of the Thana District fast the whole day on the 14th day of the dark half of Ishrin. At night they worship a cow, give in charity a calf and then take their meal. It is to be noted that this ceremony called the Jatu-dralesi is performed by women who have children. On the Haritalika day some women live on the leaves of a Rus tree.⁷

On the Somavati Imdrasya day women worship a Pipal tree and offer it a hundred and eight things of one kind. Women desirous of having a son perform a certain rite at midnight without clothing.⁸ If one wishes to have a man one has to go through a ceremony called the Hanuman in a naked state.⁹

The god Kalbhairav is worshipped by a naked person on the Varla Chathurdasi day (14th day of the dark half of Ishrin). Those learning the dark lore e.g. muth marane are also required to remain naked while studying it. They learn this lore on an eclipse day on the bank of a river.¹⁰ The rite called Somaya is performed by the host when his clothes are off his body. On a certain Monday in the month of Shravan a lamp of wheat flour is prepared and burned by adding ghee. This lamp is regarded as a deity, and is worshipped solemnly. During the performance of this ceremony as well as the preparation of the requisite food, the host and the hostess are required to remain naked.¹¹

The Swayambhu (unartificial) linga of the god Shiva is supposed to have influence over the fall of rain.¹

The people of the Thána District believe that the following ceremony causes a fall of rain. Stones are taken out of a pool and worshipped. They are then carried to every house in the village, and water is poured upon them by the inmates.² There is a temple of the god of clouds at Viranáth in the Thána District.³

The appearance of a comet is regarded by the Hindus as symptomatic of a coming evil, e.g., a big war, a great famine, or a terrible contagious disease spreading itself throughout the length and breadth of a country.⁴ Some persons think that comets and shooting stars bode evil to the king.⁵

Whenever a great person or a very holy man is about to be born, it is believed that he alights on the earth in the shape of a shooting star. Sometimes a big star falls on the earth, and thereby a noise like that of thunder is produced. When this happens, people believe that a great Rája or a holy saint whose merit has been exhausted is going to be born on earth.⁶ The following verse from the Mrichhakatika Náṭak supports the view in accordance with which orthodox people in the Konkan avoid looking at shooting stars:—

इंद्रधनुष्य आणि गोप्रसूति । नक्षत्रांची अधोगति सत्पुरु-
षांची प्राणविपत्ति ॥ पाहू नये साचार ॥ i.e.,

The following four things, viz., the rainbow, the fall of shooting stars, the delivery of a cow, and the death-struggle of saints or holy men should not be looked at.⁷ It is generally believed by Hindus that a child will immediately be born in the house towards which shooting stars are directed.⁸

CHAPTER II.

THE HEROIC GODLINGS.

In the Konkan the deities of the Hindus are divided into the following five classes, viz —

- (1) The Gramadevatas or Village deities,
- (2) The Sthanadevatas or Local deities
- (3) The Kuladevatas or Family deities,
- (4) The Ishadevatas or Chosen deities, and
- (5) The Wāstudevatas or Grihadevatas, that is, the class of deity which presides over the house and is established at the time of the housewarming or Wastu ceremony

The principal Grāma-devatas are Hanuman or Maruti, Kalika Amba, Wāgloba, Chedoba, Mhasoba Bahiroba or Bhoirav, Ganesh, Vira, Mhalsa or Maha Lakshmi, Chāmunda, Vetal, Khandoba Mallari Jogin, Bhawani, and Wāgeshwari and Shiva. In most villages the chief village god is Maruti or Hanuman whose temple is situated at the entrance of the village. Maruti is considered to be an avatar or incarnation of Shiva and is held in great reverence by all classes. A festival or jatra is held in honour of Hanuman on the bright half of the month of Chaitra. On this occasion the temple is decorated with ever greens, and flowers, the stone image of the god is newly painted or covered with red lead and oil, and garlands of the Rui (Gigantic snake wort) flowers are placed round the neck of the image, coconuts, plantains, betel nuts and leaves are offered to the god, camphor is lighted and waved round the image, incense is burnt, cooked food and sweets are offered and money presents are made. Every worshipper brings with him some oil, red lead or Cendur, a coconut, a vidi-rupai, i.e., two betel leaves one betel nut and a copper coin, and a garland of Rui flowers. These are given to the temple ministrant who offers a part of the oil and red lead to the deity, places the garland round the deity's neck, and, breaking the coconut into pieces, gives a piece or two to the devotee as the prasad or favoured gift of the deity. Saturday is the sacred day of the monkey god Maruti. Every Saturday fresh oil and red lead are offered to the god by the devotees. The Pujaris in most of the temples of Maruti are Guravs Ghadis Marathas or Gosavis.

Every Saturday in the month of Shravan (August) called the Sampat Shanivar or the wealth giving Saturday a special puya or worship is performed in the temples of Maruti in Bombay as well as in the Konkan. On this day people fast the whole day and dine in the evening after offering the god Hanuman or Maruti a preparation of rice and pulse called kichadi and cakes made of widid flour called rade.¹

There is no village in the Konkan which has not the honour of having a temple of the god Maruti. Maruti is supposed to guard the village against evils of all kinds. Care is therefore taken to build the temple of Maruti at the outskirts of the village.² There is a tradition that at the time of leaving the Dandaka forest (the present Maharashtra), Rama asked Maruti to reside therein. It is for this reason, the people say, that every village in the Konkan and on the Ghats has a temple of Maruti.³ The god Maruti is worshipped in the village of Wāund on Tuesdays and Saturdays.⁴ In former days it was customary to establish an image of the god Maruti in a newly built castle or fort.⁵ Hanuman, the son of Anjan and the wind or Marut is known for his loyalty to his master called Tali bharane तळो भरणे on every purnima or full moon day. The rite is as follows —

A tali or plate is filled with coconuts, fruits, betel nuts, saffron, turmeric or bel bhāndar, etc. Then a pot is filled with water and on its mouth a coconut is placed. This coconut, with the pot, is then worshipped with flowers, sandal paste, etc., a lighted lamp filled with ghee is put in the same place and the tali is waved thrice round the pot, which is supposed to contain the god Kāśidoba. Five persons then lift up the coconut with the tali and place it three times on the pot repeating each time the words Elkot or Khānde rayacha Elkot. The coconut is then broken into pieces, mixed with sugar or jaggi, and is distributed among friends and relations as prasād. On this occasion as well as on the occasions of all Auladharmas, that is the days fixed for performing the special worship of the family goddess or family god of each family, the ceremony called the Gondhal dance is performed. On the same occasion another ceremony called Bodan is performed by the Deshasths and by the Chitpavans. It is as follows — An image of the family deity is placed in a pot or plate called tamhan and it is then bathed in the panchamrit, that is, the five holy things, viz., milk, curds, ghee, honey and sugar. Sandal-paste is offered to it as well as flowers, lighted lamps and some sweets and incense. Five women whose husbands are alive then prepare five lamps of wheat flour called Karanandis and wave them thrice round the face of the goddess or god, as the case may be. All the lamps are then placed in the plate or tamhan in which the deity is kept, and the panchamrita and other materials of worship and food and sweet cakes are mixed together. Occasionally one of the five women becomes possessed with the spirit of the kula-deva or family deity and confers blessings on the members of the family for their devotion. It is believed that those families which fail to perform periodically the Bodan, Tali and Gondhal ceremonies in honour of their tutelary deity are sure to suffer from some misfortune or calamity during the year.¹ The local deities chiefly worshipped at Chaul, Kolaba District, are Hinglaj, Jakhmat, Bhagwati, Champawati, Mahakawati, and Golumba-devi. At the sowing and reaping times, people of the lower castes offer fowls and goats to these deities, and Brahmins offer coconuts.² The local deity of the village Wavashi near Pent in the Kolaba District is said to possess the power of averting evil and is accordingly held in great respect by the people of many villages in the District. Every third year a great fair is held, and a buffalo is sacrificed to the goddess on the full moon day of the month of Chaitra. The Pujari of this goddess is a Gurav.³ Another celebrated Sihana-deva in the Kolaba District is Bahuri-Somnaji of Khopoli. It is believed that a person suffering from snake-bite is cured without any medicine if he simply resides for one night in the temple of this goddess. Sacrifices of goats, fowls and coconuts are made to this goddess at the time of sowing and reaping. The Pujari of this deity are known as Shingde Guravs.⁴ The worship of the local deity Bāpdev is much in favour among the villages of Apta and the surrounding places. At the times of sowing and reaping, offerings of fowls, goats and coconuts are made to Bāpdev through the Pujari.⁵ The worship of the local deities Kolambai, Bhawani, and Giroba is prevalent in the Chavak villages.⁶ To the Gramadevi of the village of Tale every third year a buffalo is sacrificed and at an interval of two years goats are offered. The deities Shiva and Kālikā are worshipped with great reverence at Bakarali in the Ratnagiri District.⁷

In many villages of the Ratnágiri District the goddess Pandhar is considered to be the Gaon-devi or the chief goddess of the village. The Pujári is generally a Gurav or Maráthá Kunbi. On every full moon day coconuts are offered, and on the occasions of sowing and reaping, goats and fowls are sacrificed to this deity.¹ At Dergad there is a temple of the goddess Gajabái on the sea shore. The Pujári of this goddess is a man of the Ghádi caste. On the first day of the bright half of the month of Márgashíra (December) special offerings of goats, fowls and coconuts are made by the villagers.² The deities Ravalnath, Máuli, Vetál, Rameshwar and Hanumán are usually worshipped in most villages in Ratnágiri. The villagers in the Ratnágiri District have great faith in their local deities, and before undertaking any important business they obtain the consent or take the omen of the deity. This ceremony is known as kaul ghátne and it is performed as follows:—Two betel nuts or flowers are taken and one of them is placed on the right side of the deity and the other on the left side. The worshipper then bows before the deity and requests her to let the nut on the right side fall first if the deity is pleased to consent, if not, to let the nut on the left side fall first. Naturally one of the two nuts falls first, and they interpret this as either consent or dissent as the case may be. The villagers have so much faith in this kaul that they make use of this method of divination to ascertain whether sick or diseased persons will recover or die. Special sacrifices are offered to these local deities whenever an epidemic like cholera occurs.³ In the Ratnágiri District, at many places, there are Swayambhu or natural lingas of the god Shiva, and over these places temples are built. The Pujáris of these temples are generally Jangams or Lingayat Guravs. No animal sacrifices are made at these shrines.⁴ At a short distance from the village of Makhamle there is a temple of the god Shiva called Amnáyeshwar. The following legend is narrated in connection with this temple:—The place where the present temple stands once abounded with Amani trees and formed a pasture for cattle. The cow of a certain man of the village daily used to go to graze at this place. The cow used to give milk twice, but one day she gave milk only once, and thereafter she continued to give milk only once a day. The owner therefore asked the Garali or cowherd to ascertain the cause of this sudden change. One day the cowherd noticed that the cow allowed her milk to drop upon a stone. At this the cowherd was so enraged that he struck the stone with his scythe so hard that it was cloven in two and blood gushed forth. He hurriedly repaired to the village and related this wonderful phenomenon to the people. The villagers came to the spot, and decided to build a temple to the god Shiva over the stone. One part of the stone is in this temple and the other part was taken to the village of Kalam-buri, where another temple was built over it.⁵ In the Sangameshwar village the Bráhmans also worship the images of the local goddesses Chandukái, Jholái and Sunkái. In the Konkan the deities Náráyan, Rawalnath, Manli, Datta, Vetál and Shiva are worshipped every where.⁶ The following legend is told about the deity Vetál, the leader of the ghosts:—In the Sávantvádi State there is a temple of Vetál in the village of Ajgaon.⁷ As part of his worship it is considered necessary to offer to this deity a pair of shoes every month. The people believe that after a few days the shoes become worn out. The inference drawn from this by the people is that at night the god Vetál goes out walking in the new shoes.⁸ In the village of Khed in the Ratnagiri District, a buffalo is offered to the goddess Riddhi on the full moon day of Chaitra every third year.¹ At Narimgre offerings of coconuts, etc. are made to the deities Bhavani, Chalk, etc. on the 1st of the month of Margashirsha.² The Schoolmaster of Ibrampur states that one of the following deities is the gramadevata of every village in the Ratnagiri District: Chandka, Varadhan, Khem, Bahiri, Kedar, Vaggya, Antaral, Manava, Salbaya and Vaghambiri. A procession in their honour takes place in the months of Chaitra and Falgun. The Pujaris are generally either Guravs or Marathi Kunbis. A ceremony called Palejatra is performed in the sowing season, while the Dhol jatra is performed at the harvest time. At these fairs fowls, coconuts, goats, fruits, etc. are offered to these deities.³ At Malwan on the no-moon day of Shravan (August) local deities and ghosts are propitiated by offering to them goats, fowls, etc.⁴ At Palset in the Ratnagiri District, the god Parashuram is the most important deity especially for Chitpavans. He exterminated the Kshatriyas twenty one times, and having no space for himself and his Brahmins, he asked the sea to provide him with new land. On meeting with a refusal, Parashuram became enraged and was about to push the sea back with his arrow, when, at the instigation of the sea a black bee (bhunga) cut the string of his bow, and the arrow only went a short distance. The people say that the space thus recovered from the sea came to be called Konkani.⁵ At Anjarle there are two local goddesses Sawinkanni and Bahiri. Offerings of goats and fowls are made to them in the months of Margashirsha (December) and Falgun (March). Sometimes liquor and eggs are also offered. Offerings can be made on any day except Monday and Ekadashi, Tuesdays and Sundays being considered most suitable.⁶ At Ubhadandi in the Ratnagiri District, Ravalnath and Bhutnath are held in great reverence. They are believed to be incarnations of the god Shiva. The Pujaris are generally Guravs, Ghadis, Ranis and Sutars.⁷ The following goddesses which are popular in the Ratnagiri District are believed to be incarnations of the goddess Durga, viz. Nandi devi, Vaghurdevi, Jakha-devi and Kalki.⁸ At Marol in the Ratnagiri District there is a mayambhu or natural linga of the god Shiva. It is called Maheshwar, and in its honour a fair is held on the Sankranti day.⁹ The chief local deity of the Dahagaon taluka, Thana District is Mahalaxmi. She has seven sisters and one brother two of the sisters being the Pangala devi at Tarapur and the Delavadi devi at Ghivali. Goats and fowls are offered to the Pangaladevi on the Dasara day. Her Pujari is a Gurav. It is said that the goddess Delvadi used to receive her garments from the sea, but now this is no longer the case though it is still believed that the incense which is burnt before her comes floating from Dwarka.¹⁰ In the village of Edwan there is a goddess called Ashapuri who used to supply her devotees with whatever they wanted. The devotee was required to besmear with cow-dung a plot of ground in the temple, and to pray for the things wanted by him. The next day, when he came to the temple, he found the desired things on the spot besmeared with cow-dung.¹¹ At Mangron the Pujari of the local goddess is either the Patil or the Madhavi of the village.¹² In the village of Dahagaon coconuts are offered annually to the village Muruti, and fowls and goats to the other local deities, in order that the village may be protected against danger and disease.¹³ It is believed that any Bráhmán who acts as the Pujári of the god Shiva will find his family exterminated, and for this reason Bráhmans do not act as Pujáris in the temples of Shiva.

In a few temples of goddesses like Jakhái etc. the Pujári is of the Mahár caste.¹ A great fair is held in honour of the goddess Vajrá-bái or Vajreshwari near Nirmal in the month of Kártika (November). The Pujári of the goddess is a Gosávi of the Gíri sect. The worship of Bhimasena is not prevalent in the Konkan, but the hero Bhima, like Máruti, is held in reverence by the gymnasts. Bhima is not worshipped, but a work called the Bhima-stavaráj is read at the bed of a dying man in order that he may obtain salvation. At Ashirgad there is a gumpha or cave of Ashwatháma, a hero of the Mahábhárata, and it is said that a noise is heard coming from the cave on the full moon day.²

Wherever a village is founded, it is customary to establish a village deity as the guardian of the village. The deities chosen are Máruti, Káli, Chandkái, Varadani, etc. In the Konkan, goddesses are preferred, and on the Ghats generally Máruti is preferred. Certain ceremonies are performed for consecrating the place to the deity, and sometimes the deity is called after the village as Marleshwar³ etc. By many lower class people the goddess Pondhar is often selected as the guardian of a new village. At Shahpur, if the newly founded village is to be inhabited by high class Hindus, the deities Máruti and Durga are selected as gráma-devatas, but if it is to be inhabited by lower class people, then such deities as Mhasoba, Chedoba, Jakhái, etc. are chosen.⁴ In the Bassein and Sálsette talukas the following deities viz. Máruti, Chedá, Chandkái, and Shiva, are chosen as village deities. Cheda is represented by a long piece of wood or stone besmeared with red-powder, and is placed on the outskirts of the village. No Bráhmán is necessary for establishing a Cheda. The Pujári is generally a Kunbi or Máli, and he establishes the deity by offering it a goat or fowls and cocoanuts.⁵ Sometimes the guardian deity of a new settlement is decided upon by a Kaul. Two or three names of deities are selected, betelnuts or flowers are placed on the sides of the guardian deity of the neighbouring village and that deity in whose name the betelnut falls first is chosen as the deity of the new village.⁶ At Chaul, the deity called Bápder is very popular among the lower classes. It is represented by a big stone fixed on mortar and besmeared with red-powder. When it is established for the first time in a village, a Bráhmán is required to make the first púja or worship, but after this it is worshipped by a Pujári of a lower caste.⁷ The Mahars in the Kolába District select the ghost-deity called Jhaloba as the guardian deity of a new settlement.⁸ In many cases the deity of their former village or of the neighbouring village⁹ is named by a Bhagat or exorcist, who becomes possessed.¹⁰

In the Konkan every village farm is supposed to be under the guardianship of the minor godlings, the majority of which are called Bhuta-Devatás or ghostly godlings. In some cases the field guardians are also the Bráhmanic godlings like Máruti and Shiva. To the Bráhmanic guardians of the field, cocoanuts and flowers are offered at the sowing and reaping seasons, and to the rest, fowls, cocoanuts, and sometimes goats, are offered. The higher classes feed one or two Bráhmans in order to propitiate the deities of the fields; and for the propitiation of the minor deities of the field

Bhādrapad (September) in order that the villagers may have a good harvest, and that their cattle may be protected against tigers and disease.¹ At Akol, on the day which follows the Ganesh-Chaturthi, people throw parched rice over their fields and houses so that the rats may not run over them.² At Málád in the Thána District, for the protection of cattle, the god Wághoba is worshipped at night on the 12th of Ashwin which is called the Wágh-báras.³ In some villages of the Thána District the deity Wághoba or Wághya is worshipped on the 12th day of the dark half of Kártik. On that day the cowherds collect a quantity of milk and prepare a kind of food known as Khír by mixing jágri and cooked rice. They then proceed to the stone image of the deity in the jungle, and besmear it with new red-lead or shendur. They pour a portion of the sweet milk over the stone, and offer prayers for the protection of their cattle. They then partake of the remaining milk.⁴ At Agáshi and other neighbouring villages, before the fields are ploughed, the villagers assemble and collect a certain sum of money, with which they buy goats, fowls, red-powder, cocoanuts and parched grain. A goat and some cocks are then sacrificed to the spirits residing in the cemeteries and at the boundary of the village. Cocoanuts besmeared with gulál red powder are also offered to these ghost godlings. A goat decorated with garlands and red powder is then made to walk round the village three times at night, accompanied by the villagers, who throw láhya parched rice while passing. This rite is called Siwa Bándhane or binding the boundary, and is supposed to protect the village crops and cattle. No farmer dares to sow his seed unless this rite has been performed. After this rite has been performed, every farmer appeases his family deity i.e. Khandoba, Bahiroba, Kankoba, etc., by performing a ceremony at home called Deopan or Deváski, which relates to the worship of ancestors. Most of the farmers regard one of their dead ancestors as their chief deity, and represent him in their house by a cocoanut. They do not enter on any new business without first offering prayers to this cocoanut, and they also believe that they can bring evil upon their enemies by simply cursing them before the deified cocoanut. The only materials generally required for the worship of this cocoanut are red powder, incense and flowers. On rare occasions, goats and fowls are sacrificed. It is believed that the ancestor in the cocoanut likes to be worshipped by the wife or husband (as the case may be) of the person represented by the cocoanut. Some farmers, in addition to the cocoanut, worship a stick or cap of their ancestor along with the cocoanut, and offer prayers for the protection of their cattle, for good rain and harvest, and also for the destruction of their enemies.⁵

DISEASE DEITIES.

AT Vengurla, in the Ratnagiri District, when epidemic diseases prevail, the people of the village assemble and prepare a basket in which are placed cooked rice, coconuts, lemons, wine, red flowers and Udid (Phaseolus radiatus) grain. The basket is then carried out of the village along with a cock or a goat, and deposited outside the village boundary. To carry this basket, a person belonging to the Mahar caste is generally selected. The people of the next village similarly carry the basket beyond their village limits, and it is finally thrown into the sea. It is believed that if the basket of offerings to the disease-deities is carried from one village to another, it is sure to bring the disease with it. Great care is therefore taken to throw the offerings into the sea. In cases of small pox a feast is given to women whose husbands are alive. In some cases boiled rice is mixed with the blood of a cock, and on the rice is placed a burning black cotton wick in a coconut shell with a little oil in it. The whole is then carried beyond the village boundary and thrown away.¹ In the village of Mithar in the Ratnagiri District, epidemic diseases like cholera, small pox, plague, etc., are supposed to come from disease deities, and in order to avoid the danger of such diseases the people of the village go to the temple of the village deity and pray for protection. The special form of worship on such occasions is the Kaul i.e., asking a favour from the deity. When an epidemic of plague broke out for the first time at Sangmeshwar, the people of the village at once proceeded to worship the village deity, but a few cases of plague occurred, even after worshipping the village goddess Jākhmata. When the people went to the temple and asked the reason why the plague continued, it was announced by the deity through the temple ministrant that she was helpless in the case of plague, and desired the people to worship the god Shiva, thereby signifying that the village deity has limited powers and that the power of averting great evils lies with Shiva the god of destruction.² In the Dergad Taluk of the Ratnagiri District in epidemic diseases like cholera, etc., the usual ceremony, i.e., the Paradi (disease-searing basket) is performed. A basket containing boiled rice, red powder, red flowers, lemons, betel nuts, betel leaves, etc., is prepared and on that rice is kept a burning cotton wick dipped in oil. The basket is then carried beyond the village boundary along with a goat having a red flower garland round its neck. The goat is set free at the outskirts of the village. In cases of small pox, married women whose husbands are alive are worshipped with turmeric powder, coconuts, flowers, etc., and incense is kept burning in the house. The deity of small pox is also specially worshipped for a number of days. It is represented by a brass or copper lota with a coconut placed over it. This process is called mānd bhāraṇe i.e., arranging the materials of worship. The girls in the house sing songs in praise of the small pox deity. It is believed that in this way the severity of the disease is reduced.³

In the Sangameshwar taluka of the Ratnágiri District, when epidemic diseases prevail, the people of the village assemble in the temple of the village deity, offer a cocoanut to the goddess, and ask for a Kaul (omen). After receiving the Kaul they pray for mercy. It is believed that if the Kaul is in favour of the people the diseases will disappear.¹ At Achare in the Málwan taluka of the Ratnágiri District it is believed that epidemic diseases such as cholera, small pox, etc., are caused by the anger of the deities Jari and Mari; and in order to satisfy those deities animal sacrifices are offered at the time of their worship. There are no other deities who cause such diseases.² At Vijayadurg in the Ratnágiri District, in cases of small pox, the child suffering from the disease is made to sleep on a silk garment Sovalen. Flowers are thrown upon the patient's body, and are given to him to smell. Incense is burnt in the house. On the seventh day from the beginning of the disease, the child is first bathed in milk and then in water. Black scented powder called Abir is thrown on the body. After two or three days an image representing the deity is made of flour, which is worshipped, and a feast is given to Bráhmans and unwidowed women.³

At Basani in the Ratnágiri District the disease of small pox is averted by a Bráhman worshipping the goddess Shitala. Bráhmans are also worshipped, and a feast is given to them. In cases of cholera and the other epidemic diseases the village deity is worshipped and sacrifices are made to her.⁴

At Kochare in the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnágiri District, a woman whose husband is alive is made to represent the goddess Jari Mari, and is worshipped with flowers, red powder Kunku and black ointment Kájal. She is given a feast of sweet things; and rice and cocoanuts are put into her lap by another woman whose husband is alive. She is then carried in procession through the village with beating of drums and the singing of songs. This is similar to the Paradi procession, which is also common in that District.⁵

At Navare in the Ratnágiri District, in cases of small pox, the diseased child and the person into whose body the small pox deities called Báyás enter, are worshipped with Abir black scented powder, flower garlands, &c.⁶

At Pendur in the Málwan taluka of the Ratnágiri District the wrath of the female deities or Mátrikás is supposed to be the cause of epidemic diseases, and these Mátrikás are accordingly worshipped for their pacification.⁷

At Chaul in the Kolába District the god Shankar is worshipped by Bráhmans when epidemic diseases prevail in a village. The worship consists in repeating Vedic hymns. The nine planets are also propitiated by sacrifices of boiled rice, etc. There is a famous temple of the goddess Shitala at Chaul where the deity is worshipped by Bráhmans, who recite Vedic hymns, whenever small pox prevails in the village. The mantras of the goddess and the Shitala Ashtaka are also repeated in the Pauránic style. The women walk round the temple every day as long as the signs of the disease are visible on their children. The goddess is worshipped with turmeric and red powders, and clothes and fruits are given to her. The Kaul ceremony is also practised in this District. It is worth noticing that even Musalmáns ask for a Kaul from this goddess. The days fixed for Kaul are :—Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The morning hours are considered specially auspicious for the Kaul. There is another temple at Chaul, of the goddess Shri Golaba Devi. This goddess is also worshipped when other epidemic diseases prevail in the village. Saptāha is continuous worship for seven days is also performed in honour of the deity. The gardeners (Mālis) of the village worship this deity every Tuesday morning with coconuts gathered from every house in the village. This temple is being repaired at present.¹

When epidemic diseases prevail in the village of Poladpur of the Kolaba District the god Shiva is worshipped by continuously pouring water over the deity's head or linga. Sacrifices of fruits and animals are also offered to the village deity. Where there is a temple of the deity Māri or Mahāmari, the deity is worshipped through a Brahman, and sacrifices of cocks and goats are offered to her. The deity named Shitala is worshipped in cases of small pox.²

At Vāvashi in the Pen taluka of the Kolaba District, in cases of epidemic diseases, the people of the village invoke the god Shiva, and holy fires called homa are kindled in honour of that god. Sacrifices of boiled rice are also offered to the deity. For averting small pox the deity Shitala is invoked by the mantras called Shitala Astaka. For averting fevers the gods Shankar and Vishnu are also worshipped.³

At Medhe in the Roke taluka of the Kolaba District the god Shiva is worshipped in order to avert an epidemic, and Himnūmān is worshipped to avert fevers.⁴

At Mālsā in the Salsette taluka of the Thāns District, when an epidemic prevails in a village, the goddess Narasāhū is worshipped and the Homa is kindled in her honour. On the last day of worship a goat is set free as a sacrifice to the deity. The Dahi i.e., the offering of boiled rice, and the goat are taken beyond the boundary of the village, and handed over to the people of the neighbouring village, who follow the same procedure, and at last both the sacrifices are thrown into the sea. The goat generally dies, as it does not get water and food till it reaches the sea.⁵

In the village of Anjur in the Thana District, in cases of long standing fevers the Brahmins observe the ceremony called Udāk Shanti or propitiation by water. It is as follows:— An earthen pot filled with water is placed on the ground. On the top of the pot is placed a round plate in which the image of the god Brahmadev (the son of Vishnu) is consecrated. Four Brahmins sit on the four sides of the pot and repeat their Vedic hymns. These four Brahmins are supposed to be the four mouths of the god Brahmadev. It is believed by the people that by performing this ceremony the fever is made to disappear.⁶

At Rāi in the Thana District some people believe that malarial fevers are averted by placing secretly a small stone on the head of the god Hanuman.⁷

In the Kolhapur District the nine planets are worshipped in the house to ward off diseases such as cholera, small pox, fevers etc. The goddess Laxmi is worshipped in order to avert small pox, the worship being generally performed in a garden or a grove of mango trees, when parched rice, coconuts and lemons are offered to her. The people assembled at the spot partake of the food. To avert fever, the people perform a certain ceremony ordained in the Shāstras. If the sick person is supposed to be under the evil influence of the planet Saturn, the planet is invoked by repeating the mantras, and worshipped with the usual offerings. Garments such as a Sári and a Choli are offered to the goddesses Mári and Kálubái. When an epidemic disease such as cholera prevails in a village, the people of the village instal the deity Margai at a place where four roads meet, and worship her for seven or eight days with much ceremony. Every one brings offerings of cocoanuts, lemons, ambil or conjee, cooked rice and curds, etc. with the beating of drums to offer to the deity. After worshipping the goddess in this manner for eight successive days they sacrifice a Bali of a he-buffalo before her. The deity is then put upon a bullock cart and carried through the village with the beating of drums and much ceremony, to be thrown away beyond the village boundary along with the offerings.¹

Epidemic diseases are not attributed to witchcraft at Devgad in the Ratnágiri District. It is believed that they are caused by the accumulated sins of the people.² In the Dápoli taluka of the Ratnágiri District epidemic diseases are attributed to witchcraft by low caste people. The power of averting such diseases lies in the hands of the village deities. They are therefore propitiated by the sacrifices of cocks, goats, and cocoanuts.³ At Poládpur in the Kolába District, epidemic diseases are sometimes attributed to witchcraft by low caste people. Persons well versed in the mantras of evil spirits are called Bhagats or exorcists. Some of them keep evil spirits at their command. The poor people believe that what these exorcists foretell is sure to occur. It is believed that the spirit dwells on the tongue of these exorcists. When these spirits are hungry, they are let loose in the village by the sorcerers for the destruction of the people, thus causing an epidemic. When a spirit is to be destroyed, the people of the village assemble in a mob and attack the sorcerer, a small quantity of blood is taken from his tongue and water from the earthen pot of a Chámblhár is poured upon it. It is believed that by so doing the spirit is permanently destroyed and the sorcerer either forgets all his mantras or they become ineffective. The spirit is called tond bhut, and it sometimes troubles even animals.⁴

At Chaulk in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District, the people believe that the devotees of the Mári deity bring on epidemic diseases by the use of their mantras, and in order to satisfy them, offerings are made to the deity Mári which are taken by the devotees or Bhagats.⁵ At Váde in the Thána District epidemic diseases are attributed to witchcraft. There are some women who are supposed to bring on, or at least foster, the growth of such diseases by their evil mantras. Such women are threatened or punished by the people, and sometimes they are even driven out of the village.⁶ In the village of Anjur of the Thána District, if a man vomits blood accidentally and falls ill, or dies, it is believed to be due to the act of Muth Mára, that is, the throwing of a handful of rice over which incantations have been repeated. If there be any sorcerer in the village who has learnt the same incantations, he alone is able to return the Muth to the sorcerer who first used it.⁷ At Shirgaon in the Umbergaon taluka of the Thána District, when epidemic diseases prevail in the village, the people of the village take a turn round the village in a body and kill a buffalo. A Bali or offering of boiled rice, cocoanuts, cocks and goats is also offered to the deities that cause epidemic diseases.⁸

When cattle disease breaks out in a village the people of the Devgad taluka in the Ratnagiri District generally prevent the healthy cattle from mixing with the diseased, and the people of the neighbouring villages take precautions against using the milk, etc., of the diseased cattle. At such times the cattle of the village in which the disease breaks out are prohibited from entering the neighbouring villages. At Ubhadlands in the Ratnagiri District, the deity named Maha Gira is worshipped in connection with cattle diseases. At some places a feast is given to Brahmans, and in certain villages of this District a man is painted like a tiger. It is believed that this is one of the remedies for averting cattle diseases. At Londa in the Ratnagiri District, when cattle disease breaks out, a goat or a cock is sacrificed at the temple of the village deity. In some villages of the Malwa taluka the deity Brahma is worshipped. At Basani in the Ratnagiri District the gods of the Mahars as also the village deity are worshipped in connection with the cattle diseases. At Vasahi in the Kolaba District when cattle disease prevails in a village, a pig is killed and buried on the border of the village. A sweet oil lamp in the skull of a crab or a lobster is kept burning in the cowshed. River or sweet water fishes are boiled in water, and the water is given to the animals to drink. The owner also cleans the cowshed and burns sulphur, camphor, damru and other disinfectants. At Varsal in the Pen taluka of the Kolaba District a hawl is taken from the village deity to prevent cattle diseases, that is, the village deity is consulted through the temple priest, who acts as the spokesman of the deity. At Medhe in the Roha taluka of the Kolaba District the village deity Balubro is worshipped in connection with cattle diseases. The diseased animals are minutely examined, and the affected part of their body is branded with a red hot iron. In the village of Unela of the Thana District the village deity is worshipped and sacrifices are offered to her. Milk from the affected villages is prohibited, and vegetables are not fried in oil during the prevalence of the disease in the village. At Kolhapur, the people make vows to the god, and ashes from the temples are brought and applied to the forehead of the cattle. Cotton strings are tied to the feet or the neck of the cattle in the name of the god. They also make vows to the deities Lajari and Vaghya, and offer to them eyes made of silver, a new cloth, a fowl or a goat, when their animals are cured of the disease.

In the Devgad taluka of the Ratnagiri District, in cases of malarial fevers pieces of certain kinds of herbs are fastened together with black cotton strings and tied round the arm or neck of the person suffering from the disease. Sacred ashes are put in a copper amulet and the amulet is tied in the owner's waist. At Londa in the Ratnagiri District, in addition to herbs and copper leaves, peacock feathers in black cotton strings are tied to the waists of the persons suffering from malarial fevers, etc. At Vengurla in the Ratnagiri District, in fevers like malarial, black strings of cotton are tied round the arm or neck, and certain secret mantras are repeated at the time. It is believed that the mantras are lost if they are disclosed to the public. At Murud in the Dapoli taluka of the Ratnagiri District the mantras of Narasimha, the fourth incarnation of Vishnu, are repeated for the exorcism of diseases. Dapoli taluka people who want to cure their diseases tie a copper amulet to their waists. The mantras that are repeated on such occasions are kept secret. There are some persons in the Anjarle village who give such amulets and charms.¹ In the Chiplun taluka of the Ratnágiri District the following articles are used for warding diseases:—Copper amulets, black cotton strings, and holy water over which certain mantras have been repeated by the exorcist.² At Poladpur in the Kolába District, black cotton strings are tied round the arm in cases of malarial fevers. Some mantras are repeated in cases of pain in the right or left side of the body. Besides the mantras some signs and figures are drawn on birch leaves, and tied round the arm or the neck of the patient. Women who wish to have children wear such black cotton strings and copper amulets.³ At Vavashi in the Kolába District mantras are in vogue for the exorcism of diseases such as liver and spleen affections. For exercising eye diseases black cotton thread is tied to the ear.⁴ At Chank in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District, ashes are applied to the body of the sick person after repeating certain mantras over them.⁵ At Málád in the Thána District, for exorcising diseases caused by evil spirits, certain letters of the Nrisinha mantra are written on a birch leaf, and the leaf is tied round the arm of the sick man with a copper amulet. In order to drive out the evil spirit permanently, the god Nrisinha is worshipped, and sacred fire is kindled to propitiate the deity. For the worship of Nrisinha the ministrant required must be a regular devotee of Nrisinha, and he must also be a Panchákhari i.e. one who knows the mantras of evil spirits.⁶ In the village of Shurgion in the Máhim taluka of the Thána District, in addition to copper amulets and black threads of cotton, mantras of Musalmán saints or pirs are in vogue for exorcising disease.⁷ At Kolhápúr, the higher classes perform the religious ceremony called Anushthán to propitiate Shiva, the god of destruction, in order to avert disease, and also make vows to the same deity. The lower classes offer coconuts, fowls or a goat. They sometimes go to the exorcist for ashes in the name of the god, and apply them to the forehead of the diseased person. Copper amulets and cotton strings given by the exorcist are also tied round the neck of the sick person.⁸

At Adivare in the Ratnágiri District the following practices are adopted for driving out evil spirits that cause disease. Incense is burnt before the exorcist, drums are beaten, and then the exorcist takes a burning wick in his hand and frightens the diseased person by striking the ground with a cane or a broom of peacock feathers. He also cries out loudly. He then draws out the evil spirit from the body of the diseased person, and puts it in a bottle, which is either carried out of the village and buried under ground near a big tree or is thrown into the sea.⁹ In the Singameshwar taluka of the Ratnágiri District, the process of exorcising is sometimes accompanied by dancing and loud cries. The person who suffers from evil spirits is taken to Narsoba's Wádi in the Kolhápúr State where patients are believed to find a cure.¹⁰ In the Devgad taluka of the Ratnágiri District the exorcist, when possessed, does not dance as at other places, but freely uses abusive epithets to drive out the evil spirits; and on such occasions the threats are repeated loudly by the exorcist.¹¹ In the Dápoli taluka of the Ratnágiri District, dancing is used in exorcism. While dancing, the exorcist makes a show of different kinds of fits. They are similar to those made by a person suffering from hysteria. He also stands and sways his body to and fro for some time, then assumes a serene and quiet attitude, and begins to cry out loudly.¹² There are some sorcerers at Dásgron in the Kolába District, who dance and cry out loudly in order to drive out the evil spirits from the body of the diseased.¹³ At Málád in the Thána District dancing is used in exorcism. The following is a description of one of these dances. Songs of the deity which is to be summoned on the occasion are sung along with the music of the Tal (a kind of cymbal) and the beating of drums called Ghuma. The Ghuma is an earthen jar the lower and upper ends of which are covered over with leather. The man in whose body the deity is to make its appearance takes his bath and sits by the side of a small prayer-carpet called Isan. A small quantity of rice (about a ser) is put in front of the carpet and a copper pot filled with water is placed on the rice. The musicians begin to strike their instrument with a loud clash, and the exorcist's body begins to shake. The shaking of the body is a sure indication of his being spirit-possessed. He then sits upon the carpet and begins to throw grains of rice into the copper pot containing water, gives out the name of the particular spirit with which he is possessed and the cause for which it has attacked the patient. He then explains the measures and rites by which the spirit can be driven out. The patient is then directed to follow him and the patient is thus cured.¹

At Pidge in the Thana District when an evil spirit is to be driven out from the body of the patient, the latter is asked to hold in his mouth a betelnut or a lemon. After some time the betelnut or the lemon is put into a bottle the bottle is then tightly corked and buried underground. A copper pot is filled with water, and the diseased person is asked to hold the pot upside down. If the water runs out it is believed that the spirit has disappeared.²

In the village of Edran of the Thana District, dancing is practised in cases of spirit possession, but it is reserved to among the lower castes only. While dancing the sorcerer cries out loudly, and throws grains of Udid (Phaseolus radicans) on the body of the diseased person³ after repeating certain mantras. This is styled Bhadrani or the process of charming

At Kolhapur, dancing is not used in exorcism, but the people suffering from evil spirits sometimes dance and cry out loudly. Some of them loose their hair while dancing and even strike their heads. Some quarrel like combats, and some of them try to make speeches like orators. There is a temple of the god Shri Datta at Narsobhadi in the Kolhapur State, to which people suffering from evil spirits are brought for a cure. These people cry out loudly when the palanquin of the Shri Maharaj is carried through the village, and spirits usually quit the bodies of their victims at this time for it is said that they cannot bear the proximity of the Shri Maharaj. Patients are also cured by residing in the village for a certain period. On this account the village of Narsobhadi is considered very holy. A big festival is celebrated in this village annually on the twelfth day of the dark half of Ashwin (October). Feasts are given to the Brahmans, the expenses being borne by the Kolhapur State.⁴

In the Sangameshwar taluka of the Ratnagiri District the Bhagal or exorcism is practised by the lower caste people. It is a duty to ask a hant from the deity on behalf of the people and to alleviate their sufferings. His appointment is hereditary, the eldest member of the family generally following the profession of his father.⁵ In the Devid taluka of the Ratnagiri District low class people are afraid of sorcerers because they might injure them if they are offended. Therefore for or careful not to cause them displeasure. There the profession of a sorcerer or exorcist is not hereditary. Any one who learns the wicked mantras after attending regularly the burial and burning grounds for some days becomes an expert and may follow the profession.⁶ In the Malvan taluka of the Ratnagiri District the chief function of the village sorcerer is to worship the village deity. All kinds of gifts and presents intended for the deity are made through him. His profession is hereditary and he is much respected by the ignorant people¹. At Fonda in the Ratnágiri District the exorcist is not appointed, but one who can satisfactorily interpret or explain to the village deity the sufferings of the people is generally selected.²

In the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnágiri District, the chief function of the village sorcerer is to find remedies for the cure of persons suffering from evil spirits. His position among the people of the low classes is considered high. He follows the hereditary profession of a sorcerer, and generally the eldest son succeeds his father.³

At Chidhran in the Panvel taluka of the Kolábra District, Bhutes, a caste of beggars, are the devotees of a goddess. Some of them are called Bhagats. Devirishis are very rare. The difference between a Devirishi and a Bhagat is as follows:—A Devirishi removes the evil spirits by simply repeating the mantras while the Bhagat removes them by bringing the evil spirit into his own body and by dancing, etc.⁴

At Chaul in the Kolábra District, Bhutes go begging in the morning every day for the first nine days of the month of Ashwin (October). On the tenth day the Bhutya is given a pice from every house. These Bhutes are devotees of the goddess Shakti. At Saswane in the Kolábra District the village sorcerer comes to beg every day and is given rice, etc., but during the first nine days of the bright half of Ashwin (October) he is given copper coins.⁵ At Anjur in the Thána District the devotee of a particular god is called Bhagat, and one who knows how to summon or eject evil spirits is called Bhutya. A Devirishi is a person who knows the mantras for warding off the great evil spirits such as Brahma Rákshasa, Brahma Samband, etc. These three classes are respected only for performing their respective duties, and not otherwise.⁶

At Kollhápur, the sorcerer is never appointed. His functions are to ask a haul from the deity, to pray for the welfare of the people, and explain to them what he sees in his dreams. He holds no position in higher society, but the poor people who believe in him are afraid of him. Sorcerers are generally very cunning; they frighten poor people, and obtain from them presents and gifts for their maintenance.⁷

In the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnágiri District red flags are hoisted on Banyan, Pipal, and Umbar trees, and on certain occasions offerings of coins and coconuts are made. It is believed that when the three kinds of trees happen to grow together, i.e., close to each other, near a well or on the bank of a river, the god Datta resides there, but such cases are very rare. These trees are supposed to be the haunts of the Munja spirit, and therefore copper coins waved round the persons suffering from evil spirits are thrown underneath them. There are no sacred wells in this taluka.⁸ In the Dápoli taluka of the Ratnágiri District, the Banyan and Pipal trees are worshipped. The former is worshipped by women on the full moon day of the month of Jestha (June) and on the no moon day when it falls on Monday. On these occasions a cotton thread is tied round the tree, and offerings of glass beads, coconuts, fruits, etc., are made. These trees are also worshipped with offerings of copper coins, etc.⁹ In the Dápoli taluka, there is a certain place between the two villages of Anjarla and Harnai where persons passing by that side throw one or two stones, causing thereby a heap of stones there. It is believed that by doing this the person who throws such stones gets rid of his itch. This place is called Girjots. Hands and feet made of wood are also offered by persons who make vows to do so when their hands or legs are affected by any disease¹. At Ibhrampur in the Ratnâgiri District offerings of cotton thread, copper coins, and fruit are made to Banyan and Pipal trees on the full moon day of the month of Jestha (June) and on every Saturday in the month of Shrâvan (August)².

At Vavanje in the Paunel taluka of the Kolâba District, offerings of coins, etc., to sacred trees are made at the time of Parnant (a festival). For instance, when the no moon day falls on Monday, the women worship the Pipal tree, and on the full moon day of Jestha (June) they worship the Banyan tree. The custom prevails of the worship of a well by women after their delivery. A woman, after completing the period of her confinement or ceremonial impurity, is taken to a well, from which she has to bring home water, and is required to worship the well with the following materials, viz. — cotton thread, copper coins, coconuts and such other fruit as can be had on the occasion³. At Varasi in the Pen taluka of the Kolâba District, offerings of cotton cloth, copper coins, coconuts, betelnuts and plantains are made to the Banyan, Pipal, and Umbar trees, and also to holy wells. The Pipal, Tulasi, and Umbar trees are worshipped daily by women in this district, while the Banyan is worshipped on the full moon day of Jestha (June). The materials of worship are — rice, fruits, water, sindilpaste, flowers, mangoes and jack fruits⁴.

At Malad in the Thana District, the Banyan tree is worshipped by women of the Dra-jas, i.e., of the twice born castes, on the full moon day of the month of Jestha. Copper or silver coins and fruit are offered to the tree. These offerings are taken by the Brahman priest, who explains to them the modes of worship. The Brahman priest is also given some money as a gift. This Irâta, i.e., vow, is observed by women by fasting for three successive days, from the 13th to the 15th day of the bright half of Jestha (June). The Pipal tree is worshipped daily by some men and women of the Brahman caste. Women walk round this tree for a hundred and eight times or more daily. Some persons hold a thread ceremony for the Pipal tree in order to obtain a son, and worship the tree for a certain period. It is worshipped with fruit and copper coins. Wooden cradles are also offered to the tree. Wells are worshipped on auspicious days such as Parnant by women of the upper castes⁵. At Padglc in the Thana District the Banyan tree is worshipped on the full moon day of Jestha, and the Pipal is worshipped every Saturday in the month of Shrâvan (August). The Pipal tree is not worshipped before the performance of its thread ceremony, and its thread ceremony is not performed till the tree bears at least one thousand leaves⁶.

At Kolhapur, the Banyan and Pipal trees are considered very holy, and offerings of rags, coins, etc., are made to them. It is a custom among the Hindu women to worship the Banyan tree on the full moon day of Jestha. Offerings of cloth and fruit are made to this tree, and copper or silver coins are given as dakshana. Some women make a small model in gold, silver, or copper of the Banyan tree or of its leaf, and present it to the Brahman priest along with a present of money. All these rites are required to be strictly performed as enjoined in the *Shâstras*⁷.

At Nágothane in the Kolába District, it is believed that men who are well versed in the mantras of witchcraft and sorcery sometimes transfer diseases from one person to another.¹ Vaccination is believed to be a method of transferring disease to other persons.²

At Málád in the Thána District a method of transferring disease from one person to another is in practice among the Shudras. It is as follows :—A woman without a child cuts secretly a little piece from the garment of a woman who has children. She then burns the piece, puts the ashes into water, and the mixture is then drunk by the barren woman. It is believed that, by so doing, the evil spirit of the disease that is troubling the barren woman is transferred to the other who has children. The barrenness of the first woman then disappears, and she begets children. It is said that if the second woman comes to know of the mischief before using that garment, she discontinues the use of the same, and no harm is done to her.³

In the Umbergaon taluka of the Thána District the methods of transferring disease are called Muth Mára i. e., a bewitched lime is sent to the person to whom the disease is to be transferred. Various mantras are also secretly repeated with the object of transferring the disease to an enemy.⁴

At Kolhápúr, there are no methods of transferring disease to other persons, but it is said that the following ceremony is practised in the case of persons suffering from swollen glands. Rice, Udid grain etc. are tied in a yellow cloth, and three knots are made in it. This is then kept for one night under the pillow of the diseased person. It is taken out the next morning and thrown away at a place where three roads meet. It is then supposed that the person who steps on the bundle first is attacked with the disease, and the one for whom the rite is performed is cured.⁵

At Dergad taluka in the Ratnágiri District it is believed that evil spirits are fond of things like a cock, cocoanuts, boiled rice, etc., and when a person considers himself attacked by evil spirits, these things are waved round his body and thrown away at some distance from his residence. This is generally done in the evening, but if necessary it can be done at any time. The person who goes to throw these things away is prohibited from looking behind. The things required for a bali, i. e., oblation, on such occasions are boiled rice, red powder, and an oil lamp made of black cotton wick.⁶

In the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnágiri District, when a person is suffering from any disease for a long time, and when ordinary medicines prove to be ineffective, a goat or a cock is waved round the body of the patient, and are then put beyond the village boundary or taken away by the sorcerer. While performing this rite, the man must repeat certain mantras.⁷

At Fonda in the Ratnágiri District, the use of scapegoats is resorted to in cases of persons supposed to have been attacked by evil spirits. Curds and boiled rice are waved round the body of the diseased person and thrown away at a distance from the house. In some cases it is said that the cock which is waved round the body of the sick person dies instantaneously.⁸

In the Málwan taluka of the Ratnágiri District the scapegoat (often a cock) is waved three times round the sick person and throw it into the street. The man who goes to throw it away is prohibited from looking behind. Burnt cowdung ashes are thrown out of the door after the man has left the house, and the door is closed at once.¹

In the Dápola taluka, cocoanuts, curds, boiled rice, turmeric powder, red powder, cocks etc., are waved round the body of the sick person and taken beyond the village boundary or to a big tree supposed to be haunted by evil spirits, and in some cases these things are thrown away where four roads meet.²

In the Rájápur taluka of the Ratnáguri District scapegoats are used by the low caste people, while Brahmans use cocoanuts, boiled rice and copper coins.³ At Kálse in the Ratnáguri District eggs, cocks, goats, etc. are used as scapegoats. These things are waved round the body of the patient, and taken beyond the village limits or far from the residence of the sick person. For this rite a man from the Ghádi, Guriv, Rával, or Múhar caste is invited at night, and he is paid in cash for his services.⁴

At Ibhampur in the Ratnáguri District, the cocks and goats used for driving out evil spirits from the body of the patient are not thrown away, but are eaten by the exorcist.⁵

At Navre in the Ratnáguri District, hens are used to extract the poison of snake bites from the body of the sufferer. In cases of evil spirits alone, cocoanuts, cocks and goats are used as scapegoats.⁶

At Dasgaon in the Kolába District, a Paradi (basket) containing black glass beads, bangles, turmeric and red powders, sweetmeat of five sorts, flowers, cocoanut, a burning scented stick, and rice, is waved three times round the body of the patient, and thrown away outside the village.⁷

At Kolhápur, the use of fowls, goats, limes, cocoanuts, copper coins, dry chillies and salt is in vogue, not only in cases of sick persons, but also when a person performs a feat such as bending an iron bar, or doubling with his hands a silver coin, or winning a victory in wrestling. The articles are then waved round him and thrown away in order that he may not suffer from an evil eye. Among the rich the same rite is performed on ordinary occasions such as leaving a house, starting on a journey etc. In cases of illness it is specially performed in the evening, and the articles are thrown away at the outskirts of the village, or by the side of a well.⁸

buried, and a tomb called a samādhi is erected over it; and his descendants, instead of performing the annual Shraddha, worship the tomb of the recluse every day. It is believed that the spirits take a different form after the lapse of seven generations. The belief that the spirits of the dead are reborn in the same family prevails among the people of this district. The following measures are adopted for the purpose of identification. When a person dies in a family a basil or bel leaf is placed on a certain part of the body or some familiar sign is made in sandal paste; and when a child is born in the family its body is carefully examined to ascertain whether there are any signs on the body of the child such as were made on the dead body of the ancestor. If the same sign appears to the satisfaction of the members of the family, it is believed that the dead person has been reborn in the same family.¹

At Navare in the Ratnagiri District Brahmans are invited, worshipped and given a feast in honour of ancestors. Sadhua and Mahants, or saints, are worshipped by giving them the same honour accorded to the family deities.²

At Basani in the Ratnagiri District the anniversary day of saints is observed by the performance of a Mhajan, which consists in singing the good deeds of saints and in offering prayers. It is believed that spirits are mortal, but they do not die like ordinary human beings. They cease to exist as spirits as soon as the period of their release is over. The spirits obtain absolution by visiting certain holy places.³

At Dabhol in the Ratnagiri District the people believe that the souls of ancestors are reborn in children in the same family if some of their desires remain unfulfilled at the time of their demise.⁴

At Shirvade in the Ratnagiri District ancestors are worshipped every year by performing the rites called tarpan, which consist in offering oblations of holy water, sesamum, barley grains and repeating prayers. The tarpan is observed on the very date of the month in which the person died. The procedure of worshipping the Hindu saints is similar to that of the other deities. Owing to the belief that the spirit of the dead are reborn in children in the same family the name of the grandfather is given to the grandson.⁵

At Naringre in the Ratnagiri taluka ancestors are worshipped by inviting Brahma priests, and worshipping them with sandal paste and flowers. These Brahmans are supposed to represent the father, grandfather and great grandfather of the worshipper.⁶

At Bandnade in the Ratnagiri District the leaves of the herb called padina, (a good medicine for warts) sesamum and darbha grass are required for the worship of ancestors. The man who worships the ancestors has to turn his sacred thread from the right hand to the left.⁷

At Anjarle in the Ratnagiri District Mahants and Sadhua are worshipped in their lifetime like family deities and their tombs are worshipped after their death.⁸

At Londr in the Ratnagiri District ancestors are worshipped by making balls of boiled rice on their anniversary day. The balls are supposed to take the place of the dead parents and they are worshipped with sandal paste and flowers and by burning incense and lighting a lamp of clarified butter. Betelnuts and leaves, coconuts and Dakshina (presents of money) are given to them. People also bow before them.

Mahants and Sádhus are worshipped by washing their feet, sandal paste is applied to their body, and they are garlanded with flowers. Cocoanuts, a piece of cloth and a gift in coins are given to them according to the means of the giver. It is said that spirits can remain as spirits for about a thousand years.¹

At Vijayadurg in the Ratnágiri District the method of worshipping ancestors is as follows:—In some cases elderly parents as well as a grandfather and great grandfather are also worshipped, their feet are washed with water, and the water is accepted as tirth or holywater. While worshipping the Mahants and Sádhus, or saints, water is poured on their right hand, and they are worshipped with sandal paste and flowers, and given a dakshana or gifts of money according to one's means and will. The pádukas, or foot prints, of saints are worshipped after their death.²

At Mitbáv in the Ratnágiri District holy persons such as Sanyásis are worshipped after their death by performing their anniversary ceremony every year. It is believed that spirits are mortal. Evil spirits such as munjas, etc., undergo a kind of transformation, and it is believed that this occurs at places like Narsoba's Wádi.³

At Devgad in the Ratnágiri District ancestors are worshipped on their anniversary days, the manes being represented by pieces of Darbha grass and balls of boiled rice.⁴

At Poladpur in the Kolába District a person whose father is alive but who has lost his mother's father, has to perform the Shráddha of that grandfather on the 1st day of the bright half of Ashwin (October). This Shráddha is called Duhitra. A person who has lost his wife has to perform the Shráddha for that wife on the 9th day of the dark half of the month of Bhádrapada. This day is called Ahev Navami. These different sorts of Shráddhas are observed only by the high class Hindus. The lower classes worship their ancestors on the last day of the month of Bhádrapada by preparing a ball of boiled rice or flour, and putting it out for the crows to eat. It is believed that spirits are mortal. The ceremony called Narayan Nagabali is performed when it is believed that the spirit of an ancestor is giving trouble to the family. When this rite is performed, the spirit is saved and the ailment ceases. It is believed that the spirits of the dead are sometimes reborn in children in the same family, and in such cases the names of the ancestors are given to their children by the people.⁵

At Khopoli in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District the form of worship of ancestors is similar to that of the ordinary Hindu deities. In the case of the worship of the deities the person performing the worship has to sit with his face towards the east, while at the worship of the ancestors he has to sit with his face towards the south.⁶

At Chaul in the Kolába District, the tombs of Sanyásis, i.e. ascetics and Sádhus are worshipped on their anniversary days, and a great fair is held in their honour. The other ancestors are worshipped by the shráddha rites. The anniversary of the founders of the different sects is observed by their followers by a bhajan, i. e. singing songs in their own style and exhibiting the different insignia and flag of the sect as advised by their founders.⁷

The people of Chidhran in the Kolába District believe that the period for which the soul has to remain in the spirit state depends upon the sins of the person, or the wishes which remained unfulfilled during his life time. It is not that all the spirits of the dead are reborn in children. The rebirth depends upon the good or bad deeds of the deceased. However, if the nature of any child suggests the nature of any dead person in the family, it is assumed that the spirit of the deceased has returned to the family.¹

At Nagothane in the Pen taluka of the Kolaba District some of the communities worship small images called tanks on the anniversary of their ancestors' death, among the Shudras food is given to the crows on the last day of Bhadrapad. The custom of giving a grandfather's name to the grandson prevails largely, and is due to the belief that the spirits of the dead are sometimes reborn in the same family.² It is also said that in some of the Hindu communities, if a child cries continuously, ashes are applied to its forehead in the name of one of the ancestors in the family, and if the child sleeps quietly or stops crying, the name of that ancestor is given to it.³

At Shurgaon in the Thana District, the worship of ancestors is performed on the day of the father's death, every year. On any auspicious occasion the rite called Nandi shraddha is performed at the beginning of the ceremony. It is believed that evil spirits or ghosts have to remain in the ghostly state for about one thousand years, or at least until one of the descendants in the family goes to a holy place like Kashi (Benares) and there performs the shraddha rites of his ancestors.⁴

At Malal in the Thana District, the worship of ancestors is performed on the day of the father's death every month till the completion of one year by inviting Brahmins and giving them a feast. This is done among Brahmins only. The other communities worship their ancestors by performing the rite called Chala Shraddha and by giving Shidha, i.e. rice pulse, vegetables and ghee to Brahmin priests. A feast is then given to their caste men.⁵

At Kolhapur, ancestors, Mahants and Sadhus are worshipped by the rites known as the Puranic ritual, that is, no Vedic mantras are repeated while performing these rites. It is a common belief in this province that the soul of the person who has committed a murder, or has incurred debt and enmity, is obliged to repay the debt by being born again as a servant or in some other subordinate capacity of the debtor.⁶

The tombs of the Hindu and Mahomedan saints are considered holy, but they are not supposed to possess miraculous powers. The following is a list of saints who have been deified and worshipped by the people of the Ratnagiri District: (1) Mukundraj, (2) Dnyandev, (3) Tukaram, (4) Eknath, (5) Damodar, (6) Rairdas, (7) Akkalkotche Swami, (8) Ranginath, (9) Dev Mamlatdar, (10) Kabir, (11) Kamal, (12) Vipat Niranjani, (13) Tulshidas, (14) Pundlik, (15) Vashistha, (16) Dattatraya, (17) Sohioroba, (18) Gorakshanath, (19) Puranath.

At Shiroda in the Ratnagiri District a practice prevails of making vows to the tombs of women who burnt themselves as Satris. Vows are also made to the Musalman Pirs, and offerings are often made in fulfilment of such vows.⁷

At the fort of Jiskalgad there is a tomb of a Pir (saint). It is usual to make a vow to worship this Pir with fetters on one's legs, and it is believed that, at the time of worship, the chains break off.¹

There is at Dahibáv in the Ratnágiri District a tomb of a Hindu saint named Shri Anand Murti, to which the people of that locality make vows when severe calamities befall them, and it is believed that the saint listens to their prayers.²

When a Bráhmán assumes the garb of a recluse or Sanyási, he is considered by the people as sacred as a Hindu god, and is worshipped with great reverence, provided he abides by the rules contained in the shastras.³

There is a tomb of a Pir at Báwa Málángad in the Panvel taluka of the Kolába District, where the people make vows to the Pir, and it is believed that the Pir fulfils their wishes. Hindu saints such as Rámdás, Dnyáneshwar, Námdev are held in great honour in this District.⁴

There is a temple of Nágoba at Avas in the Kolába District where persons suffering from snake-bite, if carried to the temple while still alive, are said to be cured.⁵

At Kawad in the Bhiwandi taluka of the Thána District there is a tomb of a Brahmachari named Sakhárám Báva who has been deified by the people of that District. A great fair is held at the tomb every year.⁶

The following instance is given of a miracle at the tomb Sakhárám Báva of Kawad. A man suffering from fits showed an inclination to go to Kawad to read Guru Charitra for seven successive days. He was taken to that place accordingly. After his arrival, he continued to suffer from these fits in the morning and evening at the time of the worship at the tomb. Once during the fits he said that he would be free from the disease if Rs. 200 were spent in giving a feast to the Bráhmans at Páli. The relatives of the sufferer agreed to arrange accordingly, and instantly the man put his head on the Samádhi (tomb) and threw himself on his back. He came to his senses after ten minutes, and from that time he was completely cured. A feast was then given to the Bráhmans at Páli, and Rs. 200 were spent over it as promised. Another instance of miraculous power is cited, and that is of the priest of the goddess Mahaluzmi of Kolwan. This priest goes up and hoists the flag of the goddess on a steep hill which no other person can climb, and it is believed that he can do this only when the spirit of the goddess enters his body.⁷

At Umbergaon in the Thána District there is a miracle-working tomb of a saint called the Dátár "Pir." Sakhárámbáva of Ángaon Kawad, a Hindu saint, is held in high honour in this village.⁸ At this place it is also believed that some of the Pirs walk round the village at night, and their tombs are said to be seen in motion. The Dátár Pir is worshipped even by the Hindus of that locality.⁹

At Shirosi in the Murbád Taluka of the Thána District, Sakhárámbáva of Kawad, Dev Mámlatdár, Chandirámbuva of Khed, Narayanbuva of Nanuri, the Swámi of Akkalkot, the Swámi of Kumbhar Peth at Kolhápúr, and the Dandekerbuva of Rájápúr are the principal saints held in honour by the people.¹⁰

At Mánikpur in the Thána District it is said that a bright light or flames emanate from certain tombs of Musalman saints.¹¹

At Umela in the Thana District it is said that flames and smoke are given out from the tombs of certain Mahomedan saints situated in the locality. These flames appear and disappear very suddenly.¹

In the Kolhapur District people believe that the Samādhi of Swami Anandmurti, who was a disciple of Raghunath Swami of Bhramanāl, shakes on the Shivarditi day, that is the 13th of the dark half of Magha, and on the Ranawami day i. e. the 9th of the bright half of Chaitra, at the time of the worship called Bhajan. Among the tombs held most sacred by the Hindus of the Konkan may be mentioned the following viz. Bhujang Swami of Lokapur, Rāmdās Swami, the Samādhi of Shri Shankaracharya at Slurgion, Chintaman Swami of Murgud, and the Samādhi of Mungalmurti Morya at Chinchwad near Poona. All these Swamis were Brahmacharis or bachelors, and they spent their lives in the service of God and preached virtue and morality to the masses. These Samādhis are of two kinds (1) of saints after death, and (2) of saints on the point of death. The third kind is called Jai Samādhi, i. e. immersion in water, but no tomb of the latter kind is to be found in this Province. It is said that, if a lime is placed above the Samādhi of Bhujang Swami, it begins to shake at the time of the Jai ceremony. The present disciple of Bhujang Swami sits in (Samādhi) meditation continuously for four to eight days. There prevails a belief at Kolhapur that the swami whose body is buried in the tomb at Chinchwad is still alive. Some years ago when the present disciple of the Chinchwad Swami was anxious to take Samādhi, he had a dream in which the swami in the tomb told him that he was still living in that Samādhi, and that therefore there was no need for his disciple to take Samādhi. He was thus obliged to forego the project. The Peshwas of Poona, who were staunch devotees of the Chinchwad swami, and by whose favour they were raised to a position of social equality among the Deccan Brahmins, granted an Inam of some villages for the maintenance of this Samādhi, and the British Government have allowed the descendants of the swami to retain the Inam. The following are the principal Mussalman saints who have been deified in the Kolhapur District—

(1) Hāba Jamal, (2) Ghod Pir, (3) Bara Imam, (4) Arachit Pir, (5) Buran Sahab and (6) Mira Sahab of Miraj. All these Pirs have been supplied with annual grants of money by the Kolhapur State.²

At Ubbhānda in the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnagiri District some Hindus have adopted the worship of Mahomedan saints. Mahomedan Pirs are worshipped in the month of Moharram. On these occasions Hindus beg in the town in the disguise of Fakirs, and the alms thus obtained are offered to the Pir. They make offerings of water to the Pirs, while the tabuts are being carried to the sea for immersion. But this practice is being slowly discontinued.³

At Bandirade in the Ratnagiri District Hindus offer coconuts and khechadi to the Pirs at the time of the Moharram, and at such places a lamp is kept burning every Monday in honour of a Pir.⁴

At Kālbadevi in the Ratnagiri taluka there is a tomb of a Mussalman saint who is worshipped by the Hindus. Similarly there is a Pir at Goonkhadi in the Rajapur taluka who is held in reverence even by high caste Hindus.⁵

At Ade in the Dapoli taluka of the Ratnagiri District there is a tomb of a Mussalman saint which is worshipped by the Hindus including the Brahmins. The building and also the mosque in that village have been repaired from contributions obtained from high class Hindus.⁶ Many Hindus of Devagad in the Ratnagiri District worship Mussalman saints. Occasionally they offer coconuts in tabuts, and throw red powder over them. They also make vows to the Pirs.⁷

There are two Pirs at Vijayadurg who are worshipped by the Hindus. The same practice prevails at Rájápur and Khárepátan.¹

At Chauk in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District some Hindus worship Pirs. The members of the Ketkar family of Chauk are the Pujáris or ministrants of the Musalmán saint known as Bavá Málangad. This shows that even Bráhmans worship Musalmán saints.²

The tomb of Bavá Málangad situated in the Kolába District is worshipped first by a Bráhman and then by Musalmáns. The Bráhman worshipper performs this task more for the pecuniary benefit which he derives from the worship than from faith in the divinity of the Pir.³

At Poladpur in the Mahád taluka of the Kolába District there are no instances of Musalmán saints being worshipped by Hindus, but persons wishing to have children make vows to Pirs, and children born by the favour of such Pirs are required to assume the robe of a Fakir during the Moharram festivities.⁴

The practice of worshipping such saints exists at Khopoli in the Kolába District. Persons in trouble, or desirous of getting children, make vows to the saint Imám Hussein, and when their desires are fulfilled they dress themselves as Fakirs and beg at certain places during the Moharram festivities.⁵ A certain Lakshman Gangádhara Joshi of Rewdanda in the Kolába District is the Mujáwar (priest or ministrant) of a Musalman saint Chánsawali and he holds an Inám in connection with his office of Mujáwar of the saint's Darga.⁶

At Akshi in the Kolába District there is a tomb of a Pir which is worshipped by lower class Hindus such as Kolis, Mális and Bhandáris.⁷

The Hindus of Bhuwan in the Murbád taluka of the Kolába District worship the Pir

of the locality. It is said that the cultivators of the village once lost their cattle, and that a Fakir attributed the loss to the rage of the Pir. Since that time they are careful to worship the saint, and the result is that there has been no disease among their cattle. They offer Malinda i. e. bread and jágrí, to the Pir every Thursday.⁸

The Hindu inhabitants of Málád in the Thána District sprinkle water over the roads by which the *tábut*s are to pass, and allow their children to pass beneath the *tábut*s. Some throw sweetmeat on the *tábut*s, and distribute the same to the poor.⁹

At Shirgaon in the Máhim taluka of the Thána District some Hindus make vows to the local Pir and take part in the tábut procession. They pour water over the feet of the tábut bearers, and throw abir (black scented powder) and flowers on the *tábut*s. They also distribute to the fakirs Malinda, or Kháchadi.¹⁰

The Mujáwar (priest) of the saint Walli Amir Shaha of Shahápur in the Thána District is a Marátha by caste.¹¹

In the Kolhápúr District Pirs are held in great reverence by Hindus. They make vows to the Pirs in order to get a son, and when their object is fulfilled they offer a preparation of Til (sesamum) and sugar called Rewadi, and other sweets called Chonge, Malinda and Pedhe at the time of Moharram. They also give Fakiri to their sons in the tábut season. Some of them even bring a tábut and Nál sáheb to their houses, and spend much money on them for illuminations, etc. They dance from one Nálpir to the other saying that the Nálpir has entered their bodies. While going through the streets they cry out very loudly the words 'Yalli Dhulla'. The holiday of the Moharram is observed for ten days. On the tenth day the *tábut*s and the Nálpirs are taken to the river for the purpose of immersion. While returning home from the river with the bundle of the Patha of Nalpur on their heads they cry out loudly the following words—“Ilabidayo ala lidasha ya Husan bano alidoshake sultan allida” On the third day after the immersion of tabuts into the river, the Pirs devotees kill a goat in the name of their patron Pir and make a preparation of the goat's flesh called Konduri.¹

The following rites are in vogue for the cure of barrenness in the village of Dabhol in the Ratnagiri District—(1) Walking round the Pipa tree daily, (2) Observing a fast for sixteen successive Mondays, (3) Performing the worship of Shiva after observing the aforesaid fast.²

At Kalshe in the Malwan taluka of the Ratnagiri District a barren woman is required to walk round a Pipa tree every day in the morning, and if the barrenness be attributed to the disfavour of any deity or the attack of an evil spirit, the same deity or the evil spirit is invoked and worshipped by the woman herself, or through a medium who knows the appropriate mode of worship.³

To steal an earthen image of the God Ganpati, to make a cross or a Sradika on the bodies of children with marking nut and the worship of the god Murti or some other powerful deity at midnight in the noon by a barren woman, after divesting herself of her clothes, are rural notions for the cure of barrenness observed at Anjarle and other places in the Dupoli taluka of the Ratnagiri District.⁴

At Nanivade in the Ratnagiri District copper amulets and black cotton strings are used to cure barrenness. Some people make vows to a particular deity, and some perform the rite of Yagobali.⁵

To walk round Pipa and Umba trees to circumambulate the temple of a particular deity, and to make vows to that deity, to recite or have recited the holy scripture Harivansha, are methods in practice for cure of barrenness at Achre in the Malwan taluka of the Ratnagiri District.⁶

At Vijayalag in the Ratnagiri District it is believed that bearing a woman at the time of an eclipse = one of the surest in kinds of curing barrenness. Some people give charity, observe fasts, worship certain deities and make vows to them to obtain children.⁷

At Ubhikuli in the Ratnagiri District stealing the idol of Krishna when it is being worshipped on the 8th day of the dark half of Shravan (August) the birth day of the god Krishna, and putting a coconut or a betelnut in its place is believed to be the best method of curing barrenness.⁸

At Chaulk in the Kolaba District, the same plan of stealing the idol of the god Krishna is observed as a cure for barrenness.⁹ But here the idol is returned with great pomp and replaced in its original place after the birth of a child. The godlings Hanuman and Hanan Pir are also worshipped for the cure of barrenness.¹⁰

At Poladpur in the Kolaba District the favourite method of curing barrenness is to obtain copper amulets and black or red cotton strings from a Fakir.¹¹

The following are the methods in vogue for the cure of barrenness at Khopoli in the Kolaba District.

(1) To inquire from a forecaster the cause of barrenness, and then to perform the rites mentioned by him.

(2) To use copper amulets and cotton strings taken from a Mantrik, i.e., one well versed in the mantras.

(3) To walk round the Tulsi (basil) plant or the Pipal or Banyan tree daily in the morning after worshipping it.

(4) To feed another woman's child, or to give milk to a child.¹

At Náta in the Kolába District, a woman wishing to have a child is required to strike with a knife the Jack, the Tamarind, and the Chámpu trees during an eclipse. It is believed that by so doing the woman will bear a child, and the trees will also bear flowers and fruits.²

At Medhe in the Roha taluka of the Kolába District, the following methods are in vogue for the cure of barrenness:—

(1) To worship the god Shiva and to observe fasts on Mondays.

(2) To worship the god Ganpati and to observe fasts on Sankasthi chaturthi i. e., the fourth day of the dark half of every month.

(3) To walk round the temple of Máruti and Pipal and Umbar trees every day, in the morning.³

At Padaghe in the Bhiwandi taluka of the Thána District, images of Ráma and Krishna are put into the lap of a barren woman on their respective birthdays i. e., the 9th day of the bright half of Chaitra, and the 8th day of the dark half of Shráwan. Cocoanuts are also placed in her lap with these images.⁴

At Mánikpur in the Thána District the goddess Shitala is worshipped by women to cure barrenness. They observe fasts, and go to the temple of the goddess bare-footed with their hair loose and throwing milk on their path. They offer to the goddess wooden cradles and children's toys in fulfilment of their vows.⁵

At Shirgaon in the Máhim taluka of the Thána District, it is said that the repetition of the mantra "Santán Gopál jáy" is resorted to as a cure for barrenness.⁶

At Wáde in the Thána District, women make vows even to minor deities such as Chedoba to get rid of barrenness. They also use copper amulets and cotton strings procured from a sorcerer well versed in the use of mantras.⁷

At Dahigaon in the Thána District the worship of the god Shri Satya Náráyan is held to cure barrenness. Some women also distribute to the poor jágri equal to the weight of a child.⁸

At Dehari in the Murbád taluka of the Thána District, the village deity Dehari Mátá is invoked and worshipped by women for the cure of barrenness.⁹ In the Kolhápúr District, the help of the family deities and of the household deities is invoked. Women take turns round the Banyan, Pipal and Umbar, trees. Some make vows to the gods, and perform certain propitiatory rites as well as the Náráyan Nágabali. It is believed that the children do not live long if a member of the family has killed a snake, or if the funeral rites of a person in the family have remained unperformed. The following ceremony is known as Náráyan Nágabali. A snake is made from the flour of Rála (panie seed), and another made of gold is put into it. It is then burnt like a dead body. All the ordinary funeral rites are performed. After performing the eleventh day rites, homa, i. e., sacred fire, is kindled at night time, and after keeping vigil for the whole night, milk and a dakshana are given to Bráhmans. A feast is given to eleven Bráhmans on that day. On the twelfth day sixteen Bráhmans are fed, and on the thirteenth, five Bráhmans are given a feast, after performing the Shráddha rites. On the fourteenth day, again, a feast is given to about 100 to 500 Bráhmans according to the means of the host. It is believed that, after the performance of these rites, the soul of the deceased reaches heaven, and there is an end to the troubles and misfortunes of the family.¹⁰

CHAPTER V.

THE WORSHIP OF THE MALEVOLENT DEAD.

At Ubbūd Inda in the Ratnagiri District the following dreams are believed to be lucky and propitious. To swim through the river or sea, to rise to the sky, to see the Sun, the Moon and the other planets, to eat meat, to bathe in blood, and to eat rice and curds. It is also believed that the sight of white objects in dreams foretells success in any work or undertaking that may be in view. A deity, a Brahmin, a king, a married woman decked with ornaments, a bullock, a mountain, trees full of fruits, climbing the Umber tree, a looking glass, ment and flowers, if seen in dreams are good omens. Climbing the Palas tree, Harul in a ant heap, the bitter lime tree, to marry, to use red clothes or red flower garlands, to eat cooked ment, to see the sun and the moon without lustre, and to see shooting stars during dreams, are said to be bad omens.¹

At Vithis in the Dargul taluka of the Ratnagiri District dreams are believed to be caused by indigestion and restlessness. To embrace a dead body in a dream, to see troubled waters, to dine heartily, are said to be bad omens. Meeting friends and receiving gifts from them are said to be good omens.²

At Iond, in the Ratnagiri District dreams are said to indicate things that have happened, or are about to happen in the near future. All white substances other than cotton, salt, and bones, are considered suspicious, and all black substances excepting a lotus, a horse, an elephant, and a deity are considered inauspicious.³

At Ibbhrampur in the Chiplun taluka, horrible dreams are good omens, while pleasing dreams indicate approaching calamities.⁴

At Pandur in the Ratnagiri District it is believed that dreams foretell future events. It is believed that the dream will prove correct and effective if the person dreaming has asked three questions and received three answers in his dream. Those dreams which are caused through cold are called Jalap. They are generally false dreams, and no good omens are derived therefrom.⁵

At Bisani in the Ratnagiri District it is believed that the ancestors who take interest in the welfare of their descendants appear in dreams and foretell future events, so that the dreaming person may take the needful precautions for the prevention of future calamities.⁶

At Kalse in the Mālvān taluka of the Ratnagiri District it is believed that dreams in the last part of the night, i.e., just before daybreak, and in which great men are seen, generally prove effective. If anybody sees himself married in a dream it is supposed that he will hear of the death of some relative.⁷

At Chaul in the Kolihā District it is believed that when calamities are threatened, the guardian deity of the family as well as the dead ancestors appear in dreams and give warnings of the coming calamities.⁸

The people of Poladpur in the Kolába District believe in dreams; and when some of their deities appear in dreams and give them advice or directions, they are careful to follow them. Sometimes even evil spirits appear in dreams, and advise the people to do certain things to avert calamities. People who have faith in such spirits act according to their wishes, and if they fail to do so, trouble is sure to follow.¹

The people of Khopoli in the Kolába District believe that if a person sees in a dream, the dead body of a near relative, it indicates that the person whose corpse was seen in the dream will live long.²

At Birwadi in the Kolába District it is believed that if a person sees a snake in a dream, a son will be born to him; if he sees a hell, he is sure to get wealth. If he sees gold, it is a sure sign of losing wealth. Again, if a person sees himself taking his meals in a dream, it indicates that his death is nigh at hand.³

At Málád in the Thána District, omens are derived from dreams. In case of bad dreams the god Vishnu is remembered, and the gods Shankar and Múruti are also worshipped.⁴

At Belápur, wood, cowdung cakes and turbid water, if seen in dreams, foretell calamities. White clothes, beautiful flowers, and food containing sweetmeat are considered auspicious.⁵

At Murbád in the Thána District it is believed that all black things, and white things such as ashes, are inauspicious when seen in dreams, but a black cow, white flowers, and pearls are auspicious. Considering the four parts of the night, the dreams that occur in the first part prove effective within one year, that of the second part within six months, that of the third within three months, and of the fourth within one month, and those caused at daybreak are realized immediately.⁶

At Kolhápur, dreams are believed to be caused through some mental derangement or bodily disorder. It is customary to derive omens from dreams, but their nature greatly depends upon the different times at which these dreams occur. The dreams caused in the latter part of the night, i. e. just before daybreak, are believed to come true.⁷

At Ubbádánda in the Vengurla taluka it is believed that the soul of a person leaves the body temporarily during his sleep; hence it is said that no changes or marks of colour, etc. should be made on the body of a person during sleep, because it is believed that, while returning, the soul identifies the body, and if it is satisfied with the marks of the body it enters it; otherwise it might not return.⁸

At Adivare it is believed that only Hindu saints and ascetics, after deep and devout meditation, are capable of removing the soul from the body. It is believed that their souls go to heaven during that period and return at pleasure. At present there are no such sádhus in the district.⁹

Many Hindus in the Ratnágiri District believe that the soul goes to drink water at night, and therefore keep a pot filled with water at their sleeping place.¹⁰

The people of Chaul in the Kolába District do not consider it possible ordinarily for the soul to leave the body, but they state that the Swámi of Alandi, who died in or about the year 1886, used to remove his soul from the body by means of Yoga.¹¹

At Kolhápur, it is believed that the soul leaves the body temporarily at night when a person is asleep.¹²

At Banarali in the Dupoli taluka, it is believed that ghosts or evil spirits have the form of a human being, but their feet are turned backwards. They can assume any form they choose. Their character is ordinarily to trouble the people, but when satisfied they are said to prove friendly. The following story is narrated of a person who went to reside in one of the villages of the Konkan. His wife was first attacked by a ghost called Girha. The Girha troubled him much by playing mischief in his house, as by taking away eatables or by mixing dirt in his food. At night he used to divest the couple of their clothes, and on one occasion an ornament was removed by the spirit from the person of the wife. Tired of these annoyances, the man left the village and went to reside at a distance, when, to the astonishment of the public, it happened that the ornament which was lost at the old village was restored to the man's wife while she was asleep in the new village, and nobody knew who brought it there. All this was believed to be the work of the Girha.¹

At Ubhadinda in the Vengurla taluka, people believe that a Bhut is fierce in aspect and very troublesome, but when its wishes are complied with, it becomes harmless. The Bhuts reside in jungles, burial or cremation grounds, old trees, sacred groves and deserted houses. They assume all sorts of shapes and forms. Sometimes they appear very tall, and they can instantly assume the shape of a dog, a cat, a tiger, or any other animal. Some ghosts are even seen fishing on the banks of rivers.²

At Mitva in the Devgad taluka it is believed that the souls of those who die with their wishes unfulfilled take the form of a Bhut. They enter the bodies of people, any woman who is attacked by the Bhut of a Pir becomes able to speak in the Hindi language although it may not be her mother tongue. When a child or a person is suffering from the attacks of a spirit, incense is burnt, and it at once begins to tell the whereabouts of the spirit and the reason why the person has been attacked. He is then asked to state what he wants, and when the things which the spirit wants are offered it goes away.³ Spirits are generally invisible.

The spirits that belong to the class of malignant Bhuts are of a ferocious appearance but those that belong to the class of friendly Bhuts possess bodies like human beings.⁴

At Naringre in the Devgad taluka it is believed that spirits are cruel by nature and have no shadow, that they are capable of taking any form they like and can perform miracles. At Pendur it is believed that Bhuts eat chillies and that they do not speak with human beings. Spirits are said to remove and restore their victims for a certain period of time.⁵ At Vijaydurg, a Bhut is considered to be of a cruel character. People perform certain rites to bring it under subjection. Their actions are always contrary to nature. When a person begins to cry, dance or eat forbidden things etc. he is said to be attacked by a Bhut. When there is enmity between two persons, the one who dies first becomes a sambandh and troubles his living enemy.⁶ At Braun, there is a belief that there are two kinds of spirits. Some are for the welfare of the people, and others are always troublesome. As they have no regular form they cannot easily be recognised. They can change their forms at any time.⁷

The character of a Bhut is to trouble people and to take revenge on an old enemy. A person attacked by a spirit speaks incoherently and acts like a mad man. In such cases the leaves of the herb safāp are used

The leaves are pounded and put under the patient's nose. In a few minutes, the person who is possessed by the spirit begins to speak.¹

The people of Chaul in the Kolaba District believe that the main function of a Bhut is to frighten people, to beat them, and to make them perform unpleasant tasks and thereby to obtain food from them.² At Poladpur it is believed that if a person is able to bring a Bhut under his control he can make it do every kind of work for himself.³ The people of Akshi believe that kindling fire without any reason and throwing stones at certain houses are the main functions of Bhuts.⁴ At Vávashi in the Pen taluka, it is believed that Bhuts, while walking, never touch the earth but always move through the air, and that they have no shadow.⁵ The old men of Shirgaum in the Mahim taluka advise young children not to respond to the call of anybody at night unless the person calling is an acquaintance. For such calls are sometimes those of an evil spirit.⁶

In the Kolhapur District, it is believed that the character of a Bhut is like that of a human being. When a person is attacked by a spirit, a great change is observed in his language and actions. He begins to speak in the language of the Bhut by which he is attacked. If the ghost is of the female sex, the person speaks the language of females. It is believed that the souls of those who have been murdered or tortured assume the form of a spirit known as Sambandh, and trouble the murderer or the torturer, by entering his body. It is said that in some cases the spirit does not leave the body of such a person till he dies, thus exacting revenge for his past misdeeds.⁷ In Khopoli in Ratnágiri it is said that the cow which is given to a Bráhmán while performing the funeral rites of a dead person helps him to reach heaven. He gets there by catching hold of her tail. There are three paths to the other world. They are Bhaktimárga, Karmamárga, and Yogamárga. The Karmamárga is believed to be superior to all.⁸ At Malád, a belief prevails that the path to the other world is through the Himálayas. While going through the mountains of the Himálayas, souls find happiness or sorrow according to their actions in life-time. The people also believe that the soul returns every month on the date of the man's death to accept Kárgáras, i. e. cooked food given to the manes, and reaches heaven at the end of one year.⁹ At Dahigaon in the Murbád taluka, it is customary among the Hindus to smear with cow dung the place from which a dead body has been removed to the burning ground. The place is then covered with rice flour, and is hidden under a basket, an oil-lamp being kept, burning near by. The persons who accompany the corpse return home to look at the lamp, and it is believed that the soul of the deceased will pass to any creature or species of which footprints are seen on the rice flour.¹⁰

At Kolhapur it is believed that the soul of a person after death attains that state to which he aspires at the last moment before his death. Virtuous persons who die without any desire reach heaven and remain there in the form of the stars, where they are believed to enjoy the happiness of heaven. Some of them are sent to this world when they wish to return. Sinners are said to reach hell in consequence of their misdeeds, but some remain in this world in the form of Bhuts.¹¹

The people of Achare in the Malwan taluka believe that the souls of persons who die by accident return to the same caste, and have to remain there till the expiry of an appointed period.¹

The people of Chank believe that persons dying a sudden or violent death leave wishes unfulfilled, and are therefore compelled to remain in this world in the form of Bhuts.²

At Rai in the Silbette taluka it is believed that the souls of those dying a sudden or violent death attain salvation according to their deeds in life-time, but it is a current belief that those committing suicide take the form of a ghost, and those who die on battlefields attain eternal salvation.³

At Kolhapur, it is believed that the souls of those who die violent deaths do not attain salvation, but are turned into ghosts.⁴

The people of Ubbhindra in the Vengurla taluka believe that Bhuts do not possess visible human forms. They can assume any shape they like, but there is a common belief that the hands and feet of Bhuts are always turned backwards.⁵

The most favourable times for spirits to enter human bodies are midday, midnight and twilight.⁶ Women in delivery as well as those in their menses are most liable to be attacked by spirits.⁷ It is generally believed that persons adorned with ornaments are attacked by spirits, especially in cases of women and children.⁸ Again, a common belief prevails in the Konkan that persons, and particularly ladies, decked with flowers and ornaments are more liable to be attacked by spirits than others.⁹ The people of Fonda are of opinion that spirits generally enter and leave human bodies through the organ of hearing, while the people of Daringre hold that the hair is the best way for spirits to enter.¹⁰ The residents of Ibbimpur state that the mouth and the nose are the favourite channels for spirits entering human bodies.¹¹ At Mirba it is believed that spirits attack people in the throat, and generally only those persons who are unwelcoming in their habits are liable to be attacked. There are no special ways for entering human bodies.¹² At Chaul a belief prevails that spirits enter the body when a person is suffering from any disease or when he is frightened.¹³

In the Konkan, people attempt to find good or bad omens in sneezing. It depends upon the time and the position or standing of the person who sneezes. If a sick person sneezes it is presumed that he will recover from his illness within a very short period, but if the sneezing is caused by the use of tobacco or snuff no good or bad omens are drawn.¹⁴ Sneezing at the time of conversation or when entertaining any particular task or business is held to be inauspicious. Hence if anybody sneezes at the beginning of a task, or at the time of starting out on any such task, the time is unfavourable. Yawning is said to be caused by a relative or friend remembering the person who yawns.¹⁵ In ancient times happiness and calamities were foretold by a voice from the sky, and in modern days they are expressed by sneezing. People have much faith in sneezing and often inquire whether it is a good or bad omen to sneeze at the beginning of any work or undertaking.¹⁶

If a man sneezes with his face towards the west, it is considered auspicious. If a man sneezes while contemplating any task or business, the sneezing is considered inauspicious.

(3) Sambandha is the spirit of a person who dies without an heir, and whose funeral rites have not been performed by any member of his family. It troubles the members of the family, but when invoked through a Bha gat it becomes harmless, and even favourable to the family.¹ It is the spirit of a courteous person or a sanyasi who dies with his desires unfulfilled.² It does not allow anybody to enjoy his wealth, and takes revenge on an enemy till death ensues. It hunts trees, wells and unoccupied houses.³

(4) Devachar is the spirit of a Shudra who dies after his marriage.⁴ These (Devachar) spirits are said to reside on the four sides of a village. The spirits which reside in burial or cremation grounds, on river banks and in old trees are said to be subordinate to these. Coconuts, plantains, sugar, cocks and goats must be given annually to gain their favour.⁵

(5) Munja is the spirit of a Brahmin boy who dies immediately after his thread ceremony, but before the final ceremony called Sod munj is complete. It does not greatly affect its victim but simply frightens. When it attacks, it is difficult to drive out. It is cast out only when the patient makes a pilgrimage to a holy shrine.⁶ It resides in a Pipal tree or in a well.

(6) Khavis is the spirit of a Musalman or a non-Hindu.⁷ It is also the spirit of a Mahar or a Māng.⁸

(7) Gurha is the ghost of a person who dies by drowning, or of a murdered person.⁹ Gurha is not very powerful and obeys the orders of the exorcists. It only frightens and troubles people.¹⁰ It lives by the water side, and deceives persons at night by calling them by their names and leading them into false paths. It often troubles people while crossing rivers or creeks at night, and leads them to places where the water is very deep. It is said that the spirit Gurha becomes the regular slave of a person who takes possession of the hair of its head, and gives him anything that he requires. It requests the person to return its hair, but this should not be given under any circumstances. For if the Gurha gets back its hair all sorts of misfortunes will befall the man.¹¹

(8) Chatak is the ghost of a person of the Kunbi or Shudra caste.¹² This spirit is also known as Dae.

(9) Zoting is the ghost of a man belonging to the Aharis or Koli caste.¹³ It is also said to be the ghost of a Musalman.¹⁴

(10) Vir is the ghost of an unmarried person belonging to the Ashatriya community.¹⁵ It is also said to be the ghost of a Rajput or a Purbhaya (Pardesi).¹⁶

(11) Cheda is the ghost of an unmarried Mahar. It resides on mountains, in jungles, and the outskirts of the village.¹⁷ Cheda attacks domestic animals. It burns fields and farms, and resides at public places where the Holi fires are annually kindled. To a village being troubled by it, people offer women's sacrifices of fowls and goats.¹⁸

(12) Mhasoda is the spirit of a Māng, and is equal in might to Chatak.¹⁹

(13) Jakhun is the spirit of a woman who dies by drowning. It is said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning. It is also said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning. It is also said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning.

It is said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning. It is also said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning. It is also said to be the ghost of a woman who died by drowning.

It resides at burial or cremation grounds. Persons attacked by this spirit are taken to Narsoba's Wádi or Gángápur, which are celebrated as shrines for the removal of malignant spirits.¹

(14) Lávsat is the ghost of a widow. It generally resides in burial and burning grounds, and attacks domestic animals and their calves. It is also said to tear clothes and eat corpses.²

(15) Hadal or Hedali is the ghost of a woman who dies within ten days of childbirth or during her menses. It is supposed to be an evil spirit, but it can be kept in check by the use of a cane. It attacks all sorts of persons, but leaves them as soon as it is beaten.³

This spirit is also known as Dákan in the Kolhápúr district.⁴ Satavi is the ghost of a woman. It troubles women in childbirth, and kills their children on the 5th or 6th day after their birth.⁵ Shákini is the ghost of an unmarried girl. Talkhámba is the ghost of an unmarried Shudra or a person from the low castes.⁶ The people of Vijayadurg believe that one who hates and troubles the Bráhmans and speaks ill of their religious duties becomes a Brahma Sambandha after death.⁷ At Poládpur in the Kolába District the ghost Bápa is represented by a stone painted with red lead and oil and placed at the boundary of a field. It is the guardian of the field, and protects the owners' interests. Offerings are made to it annually. If the annual offerings are neglected, it troubles the owner of the field. It also troubles others when disturbed.⁸

The spirits known as Kálkáche Bhut and Bahirobáche Bhut are not troublesome. When they favour any person, he enjoys health and happiness for a period of twelve years. But after that period he is ruined.⁹ In addition to the varieties of malignant spirits already described, the following spirits are known at Shirgaon in the Máhim taluka of the Thána District. They are—Hirwa, Wághoba, Asarás, Gángud, Saitán and Chaitannadya. The spirit known as Hirwa requires the offerings of a bow and an arrow, bháng, báji bread, and a chatni of garlic. The Wághoba haunts jungles and troubles domestic animals. Coconuts and lamps of ghi are offered to it. Asarás are the deities that dwell in water. They infest the wells and ponds and attack women and children at noon time and in the evening. Red lead, coconuts, flowers, parched rice (láhya) and nádápudi are given to them.¹⁰

At Iblirámpur in the Ratnágiri District it is said that the evil spirit Zoting goes about headless.¹¹

The people of Medhe in the Rohe taluka believe that the spirit known as Girha, which resides in water, goes about headless.¹²

At Shirgaon in the Máhim taluka it is believed that the spirit Hirwa goes about headless. It troubles human beings and animals. The sea and the jungle are its places of abode. To avoid being troubled by it, bháng, coconuts, fowls are given to it.¹³

The people of Dahigaon in the Murbád taluka believe that the Bhut known as Peesa goes about headless.¹⁴

Some evil spirits haunt trees such as the Pipal, Bábhul and Adulsa. Some have their haunts on a public road where three streets meet, or in a dirty place, some haunt old houses, and the rest prefer to reside in burial and burning grounds.¹⁵

Many spirits dwell in burial or cremation grounds. Among them are Vetal, Jakhin, Khavis, Khaprya, Zoting, Dav, Girha, Harat and Lavsat ¹

The spirits Manja and Sambandh are said to reside near houses and old trees that produce sweet smelling flowers. The spirits Devchar and Chilegat are said to reside at the four corners or the boundary of a village ²

It is believed that all kinds of spirits assemble at night at the funeral ground when a body is burnt or buried ³

The evil spirits known as Khavis, Zoting and Kafri are said to dwell on mountains and in jungles while the others named Sambandh, Jakhin, Hadai and Lavsat are said to reside on trees ⁴

Manja resides in the Pipal tree Sambandh dwells in the Banyan, Pipal and Umbar trees. It is supposed to be a guardian of buried treasure ⁵

At Murbal in the Thana District it is believed that an evil spirit known as Hadai infests the tamarind trees ⁶

In the Kolhapur District it is believed that the ghosts of persons dying on battlefields infest mountains and jungles, and the evil spirit known as Sambandh infests trees ⁷

Generally in the Konkan, and specially in the Ratnagiri District, young mothers and their children are supposed to be liable to the attacks of the spirits Satavi, Avagat, Alavant, Jakhin, Devchar and Chilegat ⁸

At Khopoli in the Kolaba District it is believed that a young mother and her child are generally attacked by the spirit of the dead wife of her husband, or by a Hadai or Lavsat. The spirit that attacks a woman during her childbirth is difficult to drive out. The spirits are always afraid of cleanliness, and therefore, where there is cleanliness there is very little fear of their attacks ⁹

The people of Shirgaon believe that the fiend known as Medli attacks a young mother and her child. The Bhutya or the sorcerer makes use of his cane and of the dirty incense known as Narkya Uda and compels her to speak and to ask for what she wants. Sometimes she speaks and asks for the things required. Boiled rice and curds and oil with red leaf are given to her. When she leaves the body the person becomes insensible for a short time ¹⁰

The fiend known as Hadai, and other evil spirits of the female sex generally attack a young mother and her child. They are generally attacked by these fiends on a public cross road where three roads meet or under a Babul tree and also at wells ¹¹

At Ukhadan in the Vengurli taluka it is believed that those who are killed by tigers or other wild beasts are born as kings in the next generation ¹². On the other hand the people of Bankavi are of opinion that those who suffer death at the hands of tigers and other wild beasts are turned into spirits. The spirit of a person killed by a tiger is called Jaghair ¹³

At Behare it is believed that persons killed by lions and tigers attain salvation while those killed by inferior beasts go to hell ¹⁴

The people of Ishranpur believe that unmarried persons killed by tigers or other wild beasts take the form of a ghost. Males become Girhas and females become Jakhins and Lavsat ¹⁵

At Pendur it is believed that persons killed by tigers and other wild beasts become Brāhma Bīlshara. The same form is assumed by those who die by accident. A murdered man becomes a Detachār.¹

In the District of Kolhapur a belief prevails that the spirits of those killed by tigers or other wild beasts assume the form of ghosts. It is also believed that persons who die before they are married do not attain salvation, and therefore it is considered inauspicious among the Hindus to remain unmarried. This is the real reason why the majority of the Hindus marry their children at an early age.²

The ghost of a woman dying in childbirth or during her menses assumes the form of Aluast. For the purpose of preventing the dead woman turning into a ghost the following device is adopted. The corpse, instead of being burnt as usual, is buried underground, and four iron nails are fixed at the four corners of the spot on which the body is buried, and plants bearing red flowers are planted thereon.³

At Bankavli it is believed that the ghost of a woman dying in childbirth or during her menses assumes the form of Jallin, while the people of the Kolhapur District believe that it assumes the form of Hedat.⁴

The special precautions that a father has to take at the birth of a child are:—

To arrange for a suitable place or a room provided with the materials required for the occasion, and to ensure the correct moment for the birth of the child. No person other than a midwife is allowed to enter the room for the first ten days. A pot is kept filled with water and a twig of the non tree in the entrance of the house, and all persons entering the house have to wash their feet with this water.

A knife or some other sharp weapon is kept under the bed of the woman in order that the mother and her child may not be attacked by a spirit.⁵

The chief reason for ensuring the correct moment for the birth is that, if the birth takes place at an unlucky hour, special rites are necessary for averting the evil effects. These rites consist in the recitation of certain holy mantras and in giving presents of money, saccham, jāgrī, clarified butter, etc., to the Brahmins and alms to the poor.⁶

At Medhe in the Rahe taluka, it is customary for the father to throw a stone in a well, a pond, or a river at the birth of his son, and then to look at the face of the child.⁷

An owl is considered to be a bird of such evil repute that, in all parts of the Konkan, it is considered necessary to perform expiatory rites when an owl perches on the roof. If these rites are not performed, it is firmly believed that some evil will befall the members of the family. Various omens are drawn from the cries of the bird Pingla, and these cries are known as Kilbil, Chilbil and Khit Khit.⁸

If an owl sits on the roof of a house, it is a sure sign of coming death to a member of the family.⁹

At Devgad in the Ratnagiri District the sound of a bat or an owl is considered inauspicious, and indicates the death of a sick person in the house.¹⁰

At Chaulk an owl is said to have some connection with spirits. Its sound at night indicates the approaching death of a sick person in the house. One variety of the owl called the pingla is supposed to foretell future events by its movements and cries, while the bat is considered an inauspicious bird, and its appearance forebodes coming evil.¹¹

At Umbergur people do not throw stones at an owl. For it is considered that the owl might sit and rub the stone, and that the person throwing it will become weak and wasted as the stone wears away.¹

The people of Kolhapur do not believe that there is any connection between the bat or owl and the spirits of the dead, but they believe that, if an owl cries out in the evening or at night, it indicates the death of a sick person in the family. This applies also to the sound of a single pingla, but the sound of a pair of pinglas is considered auspicious.²

It is generally believed that all unoccupied houses are haunted by evil spirits. Persons who wish to inhabit such houses first perform the Pastu shanti ceremony, and give a feast to Brahmans. In former times, in the districts that were ruled by the Portuguese, religious persecution prevailed. To escape from these persecutions, people were compelled to leave their houses unprotected. Before leaving their houses, they used to bury their treasure in the ground and on that spot a human being or an animal was sacrificed in order that the spirit of the dead should hover about the place, and prevent strangers from coming.³

The evil spirits which haunt ruins and guard buried treasures and old forts are known as Mahapurush, Kharis, Brahma Rikshas and Sambandh.⁴

If there be any buried treasure in an old unoccupied house, the owner of the treasure remains there in the form of a ghost. If the treasure be near the temple of a deity, it is supposed to be under the guardianship of that deity.⁵

At Vijayadurg it is believed that a person who builds a house in the days of his prosperity and does not survive to enjoy it, becomes a Sambandh. He remains in that house in the form of a ghost, and troubles every one who comes to stay there, excepting the members of his family. A man who turns his treasure underground becomes a ghost after death comes back to watch his treasure, and troubles those who try to remove it.⁶

Unoccupied houses are generally haunted by evil spirits. At certain forts in the Konkan where battles were fought, the souls of those slain in the battles are said to have assumed the forms of spirits, and to keep a watch over the forts.⁷

In the Kolhapur District there is a village Nigra beyond the river Purna Ganga at a distance of three miles from Kolhapur, where the soul of a person named Appaji Kulkarni has assumed the form of a Sambandh and guards the buried treasures in his house. When anybody tries to dig up the buried treasure, the ghost enters the body of his daughter in law and begins to dance and cry out loudly, and does not allow any one to touch his treasure. It is also said that he strikes the ground with his stick at night. Another similar instance is cited in the case of the village of Patande in the Shirur Peta, where Bapajirao Kulkarni continues to guard his house after death. He does not allow anybody to live in the house, and if any one is bold enough to sleep there at night, the spirit of Bapaji appears and throws him out of the house. The house is therefore uninhabited at present. His wife has adopted a son, but he has to live in another village Vadunge.⁸

repeating the Rám raksha stotra, i. e., the protecting praises of Ráma, the seventh incarnation of Vishnu. Among Bráhmans, rice grains are waved thrice round the face of a child and put into water. The water is then thrown away. Even flowers are waved round the faces of small children in the evening and thrown away.¹

At Chauk in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District, some people wave the left shoe thrice round the body of the affected person for the purpose of evading the effects of an evil eye. A red hot iron bar is also cooled in water mixed with turmeric powder.²

At Shirgáon in the Máhim taluka of the Thána District water is drawn in a brass or a copper pot in the evening, and turmeric powder, rice, and any other edible articles on which the evil eye has fallen are put into it. Twentyone date leaves, each of them with a knot, are then waved round the body of the affected person and thrown into the water pot, burning coals being dropped into the mixture. The pot is then waved thrice round the body of the affected person, and kept in a corner of the bedroom for one night, with a basket, a broom, and a sandal or an old shoe placed on the top. It is then thrown away in the morning in some public place where three roads meet. If the water becomes red, it is supposed that the evil eye has been removed.³

The effects of an evil eye are sometimes visible on the face of a child in the form of small red pustules. The appearance of such pustules is called Chák padane.⁴

If a person is affected by an evil eye at the time of taking his meals, he loses his appetite. He also becomes weaker day by day. One of the modes of removing these evils is to wave fresh date leaves three times round the face of the affected person, and to throw them into water. Some people take water in a copper plate and extinguish in it burning sticks of the tamarind tree, after waving them round the body of the affected person.⁵

At Khárbáv in the Bassein taluka of the Thána District, five pieces of broken tiles are made red hot and put into water in which a little quantity of all the cooked food in the house has been mixed. Turmeric powder is also put into it. A pen knife or some other iron instrument is then turned five times in the water. A winnowing basket and a broom are waved thrice round the face of the affected person, and placed over the water pot.⁶

At Dahánu in the Thána District, two big stones, of which one has been waved round the face of a person affected by an evil eye, are struck one against the other. If the stone breaks, it is believed that the evil effect has been removed. Cowdung is mixed with water in a brass or a copper plate, and dust from a public road, hair, and burning black cotton cloth are put into another small vessel. This vessel is then waved round the person, and placed upside down over the mixture of cowdung. If it sticks to the brass plate, this is supposed to be due to the evil eye.⁷

The people of Kolhápúr believe in the effects of an evil eye. A child suffering from an evil eye turns pale and thin, and suffers from headache. To avoid these effects, elderly women make a mark with lamp black on the face or brow of the child. Boiled rice and curds, and bread and oil are also passed round the face of a child, and thrown into a public road.⁸

Generally, in the Konkan districts, opprobrious names are given to children when they are sickly, always crying, and weak, or when they are short lived. These names are

Marya, Rodya Kerya etc. It is believed that children improve in health when called by such of opprobrious names.¹

Opprobrious names are also Dhondy Kondy Kerya given to children in families in which the first children are short-lived. But the real names are different. The names of the well-known artists in Konkan Chhatre and his son Kondopant Chhatre are examples of opprobrious names.²

Among the highest Hindu the first son is not generally called by his real name but by one of the opprobrious names given above.³

Children are sometimes delighted with shoes or sandals and also with crowding. In some cases the restrictions are bored especially the right one.⁴

Hindus generally call their children by the names of their deities and ancestors and they attribute the premature death of their children to their own misbehaviour towards such ancestors or to their having abused them. They fear that such abuse or misbehaviour has offended the ancestors. To avoid the displeasure and the consequent death of their children, the people give opprobrious names to their next born such as Dagadya Dhondya Gundya Dandya Kerya Urdya, Kondya Lobhya etc. The custom of tattooing one side of the body of females also prevails in the Konkan district especially in cases where the children are usually short-lived.⁵

In the Puranas there are instances of males being transformed into females and females into males. For example, the female Ambar was transformed into a male called Shikhand and the male Naras was transformed into a female. Arjuna the third brother of the Pandavas said to the clanging his sex and turned to Bratannada.⁶

In the Si Ilamrita a book pertaining to the god Shiva in the chapter of Smantana it has been described how a man was turned into a woman.

At Kollapur there are no instances known of a change of sex. The goddess Vallamma has a high reputation in this district for making a change in the habits and deportments of men and women especially among low caste people. It is believed that the curse of this goddess has the power of destroying the virility of males whereupon they become like females. Many instances of this type can be seen at the fair of the goddess Vallamma which is held in Vargashiksha (December) when dressed in women's clothes and veils are often seen at the fair.⁷

In Western India iron nails are generally used when any spirit is to be buried in the ground. Other metals such as gold, silver and copper are sometimes offered to the ghosts. The blood of fowls and goats is also offered to them. When incense is burnt before a sorcerer the spirits enter into his body. Water is charmed and sprinkled over the body of a person attacked by an evil spirit. Rice and added grains are required for exorcising spirits. Red powder, Punjar turmeric powder, black pigment, kajal, lemons, Naraka, Nada, a kind of incense, betel leaves, betelnuts, coconuts, mango leaves, Nirgud leaves and pieces of cloth are also used for the same purpose.⁸

Cane sticks are used by people as a protection against evil spirits. A stick cut from the tree known as Pandhri is also used as protection. Clarmed black cotton strings are tied to the wrist, arm or neck. If a man is very much afraid of a ghost he repeats the name of the monkey god Máru or any other deity that may be favourable to his family.⁹

The blood of fowls and goats is used as a protection against ghosts and Devacháras, and also against witchcraft. Charmed water is waved round the person affected by an evil spirit, and thrown away. Rings, amulets, and anklets made of metals of five kinds are put on the hands and legs of children to ward off the effects of evil spirits.¹

It is customary among certain people to apply spittle to the sandalpaste mark on the forehead of a man, and to the red Kunku mark on the forehead of an unwidowed woman. It is considered to be a protection against evil spirits.²

The beak of an eagle, a stick cut from a tree known as Pándhri, a cane having three joints, and the root of a shrub called Shrávad, which has white leaves, are used as protection against evil spirits.³

At Pendur in the Málwan taluka of the Ratnágiri District it is believed that an iron stick held in the hand is a protection against evil spirits.⁴

At Chaul in the Karjat taluka of the Kolába District, pictures of certain deities are tattooed on the body for the purpose of protection against evil spirits. It is also believed that evil spirits run away when salt and garlic are thrown into fire as they cannot bear the smoke of burning garlic.⁵

At Medhe in the Rohe taluka, when the dead body of a woman dying within ten days of her delivery is taken out of the house for burial, an iron horseshoe is driven into the threshold of the house, and grains of Náchani are scattered in the street while the corpse is being carried to the burial ground.⁶

At Bhuwan in the Murbád taluka some people tie a square piece of leather to the necks of their children as protection against evil spirits.⁷

At Rái, a custom prevails of putting coral necklaces on children as a protective against evil spirits.⁸

Iron nails and horseshoes are driven into the threshold or on to the door of a house on the full moon day or the last day of the Hindu calendar month at evening time, to prevent the entrance of evil spirits. Dirty localities being considered to be haunts of evil spirits, people living in such localities burn incense in their houses every day. While exorcising evil spirits the sorcerers throw charmed Udid grains and Rále panic seeds on the body of the diseased, or place these things below his bed. Rings made of metals of five kinds,—iron, copper, brass, silver and gold—are charmed on an eclipse day, and worn by people. Red lead and cowries are tied to the necks or feet of animals as protection against evil spirits. The spirits that haunt buried treasures are pacified by the blood of fowls and goats when digging up such treasures.⁹

Certain mantras are written on a paper, and the paper is tied to a black cotton string, or the paper is put into a copper amulet, and then tied to a black cotton string. The black cotton string with the amulet is then tied round the arm or the neck of a person attacked by evil spirits, or suffering from malarial fevers. These mantras are never disclosed to anybody.¹⁰

Nádádora is a black cotton thread having seven or nine knots with a charmed paper in one of these knots. The thread is first held over burning incense, and then tied round the neck or the arm of the diseased. Sunday is generally chosen for attaching these threads.¹¹

At Poladpur in the Kolaba District, there lived a sorcerer who used to give such amulets and charmed threads. He placed about ten or twelve copper rings or amulets in a copper plate kept in the sun. While thus exposed to the sun these amulets were continuously watched by the sorcerer for some two hours, repeating certain mantras.¹

At Malad in the Thana District, copper amulets and charmed black cotton threads in the name of kal Bhairav, an incarnation of the god Shiva, are used as protective against evil spirits. They are tied to the arms or the neck of the diseased on an eclipse day, on the last day of the Hindu calendar month, or on a Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.²

At Kolhapur, the use of amulets is generally resorted to by people suffering from the attacks of evil spirits or from malignant fevers. The sorcerer who exorcises the evil spirits writes certain mantras on a paper, or draws certain symbols and repeats the mantras over them. The paper is then wrapped in an amulet made of copper or silver, and fastened to a cotton thread. This amulet is tied round the arm or the neck of the diseased. Before tying it to the arm or the neck, it is once held over burning incense.³

A sacred circle is frequently used as a protection from spirits. The sorcerer draws a circle on the ground with his stick, and the following articles are put inside it: Coconuts, lemons, red lead, and a Kohla gourd. Owls are also sacrificed to this circle. The filling in of this circle is called mandabharane by the exorcists.⁴

Rice or Udid grain, and ashes charmed by mantras, are scattered round a certain area of land, or are given to a person supposed to be affected by evil spirits. The spirits cannot enter a place charmed in this manner. They are also scattered round the place supposed to be haunted by evil spirits in the belief that neither evil spirits nor snakes can transgress the boundary thus marked by a sorcerer.

Formerly sages and saints used to make such sacred circles round their residence repeating certain mantras, for their protection from evil spirits. It is believed that the spirits cannot enter or leave these enchanted circles. They used to bury bottles containing such spirits at the boundaries of these circles. There are many such places in the Kolhapur District such as Buranssleeb or Brahmapuri, the Dadhobunn of Panhala, and Babu Jamāl at Kolhapur.⁵

It is a general belief among all classes of Hindus in the Bombay Presidency that Saturday is an unlucky day, and in some places Friday and Tuesday are also considered inauspicious.

Sunday is considered as an ordinary day. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday are believed to be auspicious or lucky days.

It is said that a thing suggested or thought of on Friday cannot be carried out successfully.⁶

Sowing seed and watering trees is strictly forbidden on Sunday. It is believed that trees do not bear well if watered on Sundays.⁷

Tuesday and Friday are considered unlucky days for beginning a new task. Wednesday and Saturday are said to be inauspicious for visiting another village.⁸

The numbers 2, 11, and zero are believed to be lucky. 4, 5, 10 and 8 are unlucky and 1, 3, 7 and 9 are considered as middling or moderate.

The figure zero is by some considered inauspicious.⁹

The numbers 5, 7, 9 are said by some to be auspicious and 1, 3, 11 and 13 inauspicious.¹⁰

Odd numbers are auspicious, and even numbers are said to be inauspicious.¹¹

The following are generally held to be auspicious omens —

While going on any business, to come across an unwidowed woman, a cow, Bráhmans, a five-petaled flower, or a pot filled with water;¹ the throbbing of the right eyelid and of the right arm of a man, and of the left eyelid of a woman, a Bráhman coming in front with a cup and a spoon in his hand after taking his bath;² the appearance of a peacock, the Bháradváj or the blue jay, and the mongoose, especially when they pass on the left side of the person going on business.³

The following are considered to be auspicious when seen within a hundred paces of a person starting on business:—

Bráhmans, unwidowed women, boiled food, meat, fishes, milk, any kind of coin, the bird Cháshta or the blue jay, passing by the left side, the appearance of the moon in front, a person coming across one's path with vessels filled with water, and a married couple, a cow with its calf, images of god, cocoanuts and other fruits, the mother, white clothes, the sound of a musical instrument, a horse, an elephant, curds, flowers, a lighted lamp, a jackal, a spiritual preceptor, a public woman, a Mahár, a washerman coming with a bundle of washed clothes, and a marriage procession.⁴

The following objects and persons are generally believed to be inauspicious:—

Oil, buttermilk, a couple of snakes, a monkey, pig, and an ass, firewood, ashes and cotton, a person with a disfigured nose, a man dressing his hair in the shape of a crown, red garlands, wet clothes, a woman wearing red cloth, an empty earthen vessel, a Bráhman widow, a Brahmachári and an unmarried Bráhman,⁵ a widow, a bare-headed Bráhman, a cat going across the path, a dog flapping his ears, meeting a barber with his bag, a beggar, sneezing, or the asking of a question at the time of departure, waiting, meeting a person with an empty vessel,⁶ howling of dogs and jackals, a pair of crows playing on the ground, and a lighted lamp extinguished by its fall on the ground.⁷

While plans or proposals are being made, it is considered inauspicious if any one sneezes or the sound of a lizard is heard.⁸ Meeting a person of the depressed classes whose touch is pollution, or a Bráhman who accepts funeral gifts, is considered inauspicious.⁹ Meeting a woman who is in her menses, a mourner, a buffalo, a snake and a diwad are considered inauspicious.¹⁰ An iron vessel or an iron bar, cow dung cakes, salt, grass, a broom, a vulture, and a washerman bringing with him dirty clothes are also considered to be inauspicious omens.¹¹

Among the Hindus in Western India, for the purpose of helping the spirit to go to heaven safely, and for securing its goodwill towards the survivors, after death ceremonies called the Shráddhas are generally performed. Some perform these ceremonies once a year in the month of Bhádrapada, and others perform them twice or thrice i.e. on the anniversary day of the deceased as well as in the dark half of Bhádrapada, which is generally known as the manes' fortnight (pitrú paksha).¹²

The funeral solemnities performed from the 1st to the 14th day from the death of the deceased are as described below:—

On the first day, at the time of burning the dead body, a plot of ground is purified by repeating certain mantras, and the corpse is then placed on it. Before setting the funeral pile on fire, balls of boiled rice or wheat flour are put on the face, the forehead, arms and the chest of the corpse. Such balls are placed on the body of the deceased only when death has taken place on an unlucky day or when there is an unlucky conjunction of stars. The son or son-in-law carries the body of the deceased generally, and rests it on the floor of the house. On the third day he goes to the burning place, collects the ash, and puts it in a pot and throws it into the sea. On this occurs on the day recommended by the relatives of the deceased. Religious persons who are able to go to Benares keep the bones of the deceased pure and throw them into the Ganges at Prayag near Benares after performing certain Shradh rites there. The giving of oblations continues daily till the tenth day. The oblations of the tenth day are called Das Poda. The rites of the eleventh day are called Fhoti. On the eleventh day the person performing the rites to cleanse himself is called thari after sipping a little cow urine. Cooked food is prepared at the place where the rites of the eleventh day are performed and Brahmins are fed there or at least thirty two potsful of cooked food are offered to the sacred fire. A big ball of boiled rice is put before the sacred fire or near the Brahmins taking the meals. This ball is then thrown to the sea. A male calf is branded with pees and let loose. This calf is called Jasu and is considered sacred by the villagers. On the thirteenth day a ceremony is for propitiating the eight Jasus and the eleven Rudras are performed and gifts of a plot of ground, a cow, cooking vessels, various kinds of corn, golden images, silver and copper coins, clothes, shoes, umbrellas, bellings etc. are given to the Brahmins collected there. On the thirteenth day after death a fast is given to 13 or more Brahmins, a gift of a bull and a Varakaddan is the gift of a bull and Copralinse of a cow and a calf are also sent to the Brahmins on the thirteenth day.

Persons of all low rank are buried in the public or durumti cemeteries. In dying within a few months from the birth of Sanyas are buried. The bodies of persons suffering from leprosy are treated as dead. Among Langyats the dead are always buried. Certain mantras are repeated while burying or burning the dead body. While burying coconuts and certain kinds of grain are thrown into the grave and after covering the dead body with salt the grave is filled up with earth and stones. While burning the dead body a place on the funeral pyre with its head to the north is reserved for the soul. This wood, sandalwood and Belwood are kept to the left before the

the dead body over it. Cocoanuts and camphor cakes are placed on the body, and it is set on fire. Among the Lingáyats and Gosávis the dead are buried. Before burying, the Lingáyats have to take a written order from their priest, the Ayya or Jangam. The paper is then tied to the neck of the deceased, and the body is placed in a bag made of new cloth, the head being allowed to remain out of the bag. Bhasma or ashes, salt and camphor are also put into the bag along with the corpse, which is then buried. The Jangam repeats mantras when the body is in the grave. No such written order is necessary for the burial of Gosávis. A coconut is broken on the head of the corpse at the time of burying it. Among high class Hindus the corpse is carried to the funeral ground in a bier made of bamboos. Among the Lingáyats a gaily dressed frame called Makhar is prepared on the bier, and the body is dressed with clothes and head dress and seated in the Makhar. Some of them carry the dead body in a bag made of blanket. There is a custom of keeping foot-prints on the spot where a Sanyási is buried, and they are daily worshipped by the people.¹ Among the Káthawatis of Thána and Kolába districts the dead body is first buried, and after a few days the skeleton is taken out of the grave and then burnt as usual.² Among the high class Hindus the moustaches are shaved at the death of parents paternal uncle and elder brother. Among the Shudras it is not necessary to shave.³ Persons who have lost their parents have to perform certain funeral rites or Shráddhas when they visit holy places such as Benáres, Prayág, Ayodhya and Násik, and they have to shave their moustaches at all these places before performing the funeral rites.⁴ Moustaches are also shaved as a penance for certain sins.

The Agnihotri, i.e., one who preserves perpetual fire in his house for worship, has to get himself shaved every fortnight.⁵

Among high class Hindus boiled rice is daily offered to the dead after a portion has been thrown into the fire, the remainder being given to the crows. The portion thrown in the fire is called Vaishvadev, and that which is given to the crows is called Kágwás. Among other Hindus it is given on the last day of Bhádrapada and on the date of the father's death, annually.⁶ Oblations of boiled rice are given to the dead every day, on the last day of the Hindu calendar month, on the date of a person's death every month, on the same date of the dark half of Bhádrapada every year. These oblations are put out of the house before taking the meals. It is believed that the ancestors come down in the form of crows to partake of these offerings.⁷ Oblations of cooked food are also offered to a cow, and considered thus to be received by the dead. They are especially given to the crows annually in the dark half of Bhádrapada on the date of the deceased's death.⁸ After the corpse has been carried to the funeral ground, an oil lamp containing one cotton wick is kept on the spot where the deceased expired. The flame of the lamp is directed towards the south as it is believed that the soul goes to heaven by the south. A ball of boiled rice and a little quantity of water or milk is kept daily for the first ten days near the lamp while repeating the name of the deceased and of the gotra to which it belonged. The lamp is taken out of the house on the 11th day.⁹

Hindus believe that impurity attaches to all the things in the house in consequence of the death of a person in that house. All those things which can be purified by washing are washed and taken back, while things like earthen pots cooked food etc are thrown away special care being taken to break these pots so that they may not be used again. Even the walls of the house are white washed.¹ The earthen pots that are required for the funeral rites of the dead are all broken. One which is required for boiling water to bathe the corpse is broken when the body is carried to the funeral ground. Of the rest one is broken at the funeral place after the so-laying is over three round the pile with unbroken earthen pots filled with water. It is believed that by so doing an evil draughting water out of these vessels would be infected by disease and thus with reason will be joyful are broken. The mourners who use earthen vessels during the mourning break the same at the end of the mourning period.² Along the shores of Chaulani and Holabadi treat all earthen vessels in the house are broken on the eleventh day after a death in the family the chief reason assigned for this act being that the white and red vessels of the deceased might lurk in the earthen vessels and cause trouble to the inmates of the house.³

All the members of the family of the deceased have to observe mourning for ten days. They are purified on the eleventh day after taking a bath and a pig Panigarya or the sacrifice of the cow. The son of the deceased person or the nephew performs the funeral rites of the deceased purified on the twelfth day after completing the rites of Sapadi. The mourning does not end till the relatives are not in mourning. If a child is born in the family after the death of a son any animal is offered to the family as a gift to perform the funeral rites of the child. The rites are performed during the first twelve days beginning from the first day or from the 3rd 5th till the 9th. On the period of mourning is not allowed to go out during the twelve days. A person hearing of the death of a member of his family within the first ten days from the date of the death becomes free from that mourning on the eleventh day. If he happens to die within one month of the death he has to observe it for three days and after one month he has to observe it for one day only.⁴ The son or one who performs the funeral rites of the deceased has to sleep on the ground and has to take his meals only once a day till the end of the 13th day. He takes his bath in cold water. Sweet things are not prepared in the house during the days of mourning. During the period of mourning every morning a Brahmin comes to the mourner's house and recites some passages of the Gaṇi Purana which relates to the fate of the soul after death. On the eleventh day the house is burned and the cow dung and cow urine is sprinkled on the house. All the clothes are washed. Mourning is observed in the case of a death of a Sangas and the Lingavites do not observe any kind of mourning.

The brother of the deceased has to observe all the members belonging to the family have to observe the mourning for ten days. The married sister of the deceased has to observe it for three days. From the fifth or sixth generation the same rule is observed for the mourning only. In the case of the death of a wife performs the husband has to observe mourning for three days. During the mourning the gods are not worshipped or go to the temples. Milk is also prohibited during the mourning period. The mourners are not to clean the body except the members of the family.

On the thirteenth day the sons and other relatives of the family are taken to the temple to pray for the repose of the soul.

for the purpose. It is believed that after going to the temple on the 13th day, the sons and the other members of the family are at liberty to go out of the house.¹

At Kolhápúr it is believed that the deities Etalái and Kálkái of the Konkan districts keep with them evil spirits as their servants. These servant spirits obey the orders of these deities. Some people in this district go to the temples of these deities and request them to lend them the services of these spirit servants. It is considered very lucky to secure the help of these spirits. The temple ministrant then requests the deity to give a Kaul or omen. For this purpose, the temple ministrant calls on the deity to enter his body, and when he is possessed by the spirit of the deity, he allows the applicant to take with him one of the deity's servants for a fixed period. The Gurav, or the ministrant, then explains to the person the period for which the spirit servant is given, and the amount of the annual tribute required to be given to the deity for the use of her servant. He also gives him a cocoanut and sacred ashes. The applicant then returns home, believing that the spirit servant will follow him, and from that time he prospers. This spirit servant is called Chetuk, and it can be seen only by the person in whose charge it is given by the Gurav.²

At Achare in the Ratnágiri District, the spirit of a Bráhma well versed in the Vedas is called Mahápurusha and it is said to be benevolent. It haunts Pipal and Umbar trees.³

At Murbád in the Thána District, the spirit known as Vetál, the king of evil spirits, is considered to be benevolent.⁴

The spirits known as Mahápurush haunts the Pipal and Umbar trees. Avagat the ghost of a widow haunts the Avali (Phyllanthus emblica) tree. Alavant, the ghost of a woman dying at childbirth or during her menses, lives in the Nágchampa, Surang and the Kájra trees. Devachár, Sambandh, Munja, Zoting, Khavis and Khápura reside in trees and plants.⁵

The people of Kolhápúr believe that the spirits known as Bramhasambandh, Brahma Rákshasa, and Khavis reside in trees.⁶

The spirits known as Devchár and Chálegat are considered to be the special protectors of crops and cattle.⁷

The people of Ubhádándá in the Ratnágiri District believe that the village deities and the Devachárs are the special protectors of crops and cattle. Offerings of fowls and cocoanuts are made to them annually.⁸

At Kochare in the Ratnágiri District, the spirit known as Viswáti is believed to be the special protector of crops and cattle.⁹

The people of the Kolába District consider that the spirits known as Mhashya, Khavis, and Bándav are the protectors of crops and cattle.¹⁰

At Dahánu in the Thána District, the spirit Cheda is believed to be the guardian of crops and cattle.¹¹

The people of Kolhápúr believe that the deities of the fields protect the crops and cattle. Those who are in possession of the Chetuk, or the servant spirit, are sure to find their crops and cattle protected by this servant spirit.¹²

Evil spirits are not usually invoked to frighten children, but occasionally the names of goblins such as Bágulbáwa, Bowáji, Gosávi etc. are mentioned to scare them.¹³

CHAPTER VII

TREE AND SERPENT WORSHIP

Groves of mango trees are considered to be sacred as they have a pleasing appearance and afford grateful shelter against the heat of the day. It is a general belief among Hindus that trees from which such pleasure and protection are derived must naturally be the abode of the gods. There are many such groves in Satara. During the spring season people go to these groves and worship the trees. The Hindus have a general prejudice against cutting living trees which yield fruits, and it is considered specially inauspicious to cut the following trees —

Umbar, Mad or Banjan tree, Pipal, Saundad or Shami, Palus, Bel, Rui, Arabi and the Tulsi plant for it is believed that these trees are the abode of deities, e.g. the god Dattatraya resides under the Umbar tree, the goddess Parvati on the Banjan tree, and the god Vishnu resides near the Tulsi plant. The god Brahma, the creator of the world, is found in the Pipal tree. The plantain tree is also considered to be sacred. While gathering a bunch of plantains, the tree is first cut before the bunch. It is considered inauspicious to gather the bunch without so doing.¹

There are certain groves at Ubhadanda in the Vengurla taluka of the Ratnagiri District which are supposed to be haunted by Devachars, and are therefore not cut by the people.²

The people of Ichampur in the Chiplun taluka consider it inauspicious to cut the Mad and Pipal trees of which the thread ceremonies have been performed. After the thread ceremony of these trees is over a stone platform is raised around them.³

At Fonde in the Desgad taluka it is considered inauspicious to cut the trees and the groves that surround the temple of a village deity, for they are believed to belong to that deity.⁴

At Padghar in the Thana District the trees which are supposed to have been haunted by evil spirits such as Santandh, Munja, Devachar etc. are not generally cut by the people through fear of these spirits. When any tree is cut down the custom is to keep a stone at the root of the tree in order that the phier may no longer be affected or haunted by the spirit in the tree.⁵ There are certain families who do not burn Pipal, Akhar or Shivani wood. They believe that the burning of these trees causes harm to their families. It is said that the burning of the Apta tree causes the breeding of the insect known as Gochadi i.e. the cattle or dog louse.⁶

There is an Amdambar tree of the god Dattatraya at Bhilawadi and a big Banjan tree near the mouth of the Lingayat mandri named Kadappa near Kollapur which are worshipped by the people of the neighbouring villages. The Saundad tree better known as Shami, is worshipped once a year on the Dasara the 10th day of the bright half of Ashwin (October). It is said that Pama the seventh incarnation of Vishnu kept his arms on the Shami tree during his fourteen years' exile and took them back again when he married upon Lanka or Ceylon to kill Pawan the demon king of Ceylon. When he was going to Lanka he bowed to the Shami tree and as he was successful in his undertaking, the Mara is used to start for a camp on the Dasara day after worshipping the Shami tree, and distributing its leaves among their friends calling it Surarn or gold. This is said to be the origin of the festival of Dasara. A species of the tamarind tree called Gorakh Chinch is said to be connected with the Hindu saint Gorakhnāth. For this reason this tree is worshipped by the people. A great fair is held every year at Battis Shirāle in the Satāra District, which is situated at a distance of about ten miles from Kolhāpur.¹

The Pipal, the Umbar, the Vad or Banjan tree, and the Tulsi plant are worshipped by Hindus in general. The Apta tree is worshipped by Hindus on the Dasara day, and its leaves are distributed under the name of sona, or gold, among their friends and relatives.²

At Medhe in the Roha taluka of the Kolāba District, there is a tree Vehala (Beleric myrobalan) which is believed to be connected with the local deity Mhasoba. It is considered to be a sacred tree, and nobody dares to cut it or to touch it with the feet.³

At Shirgaon in the Māhim taluka of the Thāna District there is a Rānjani tree on the bank of a tank called Khambāle, which is said to be connected with the deity Brahma; and therefore no branch of that tree is cut by the people. It is considered harmful to cut the tree.⁴

At Gānagāpur in the Kolhāpur District, there is a Vad tree connected with the saint Kabir. It is called Kabirvad. There is also an Ardumbar tree connected with the god Dattātraya, and known as Dattātraya Ardumbar.⁵

The Umbar, Pipal, Vad, and the Tulsi plant are considered to be sacred, and are respected by Hindus. The following are some of the legends about their sacredness.

Umbar—When the god Vishnu in his fourth incarnation, called Narsinh, i.e. half man and half lion, tore into pieces the body of the demon named Hiranyakashipu with his claws, he felt a burning sensation of the poison from the body of that demon, which was assuaged by thrusting his hands into the trunk of the Umbar or Aradumbar tree.⁶

In order that they may get the auspicious sight of a deity early in the morning, Hindus generally plant the Umbar and Tulsi trees in front of their houses, and worship them daily. The juice of the root of the Umbar has a cooling effect, and hence it is freely used in cases of measles or itch. Its sap is also used as medicine for swellings. It is very pleasant to sit under the shade of this tree, and as it is believed that the god Dattātraya resides beneath this tree, it is held very sacred by the Hindus.⁷

Pipal—The Pipal tree is considered very sacred because it is believed that the god Brahma resides in the roots, the god Vishnu in the trunk, and the god Shiva on the top of this tree. Persons who make a particular vow or have any objects to be fulfilled worship the Pipal tree, and walk round it several times every day.⁸ The evil spirits Sambandh, Devachār, Munja, and Vetāl haunt the Pipal tree. These spirits are considered to be the servants of the god Shiva. It is also believed that persons who worship and walk round this tree daily are not affected by those spirits. The Pipal tree is specially worshipped at dawn on Saturday as it is considered that the gods Brahma, Vishnu, and Mahesh or Shiva happen to be there at that time.⁹

Muralis. They are married to the god Khandoba, and have to earn their livelihood by begging in villages. A male child thus offered to the god is called a Vághya.¹

There is a custom of offering children to the deities Yallamma and Khandoba in fulfilment of vows made in order to get a child. The child is taken to the temple of these deities, accompanied with music. The temple ministrant asks the child to stand on a wooden board on a heap of rice in front of the deity, and puts into its hands a paradi—a flat basket of bamboo, tying to its neck the darshana of the deity. A female child is married to the dagger—Katyár—of the deity. When once this ceremony has been performed, parents abandon their rights to such children. When these children come of age, the males can marry but the females cannot. The latter earns her livelihood begging jogava in the name of the goddess Amba with a paradi in her hand. A male child offered to the goddess Yallamma is called jogata, and a female, jogatin. Children dedicated to the goddess Máyáka are called Jogi and Jogin. Children offered to Firangái and Ambábái are called Bhutya (male) and Bhutin (female).²

In the Konkan districts there is a class of women known as Bhávinis who are said to be married to Khanjir, i.e., a dagger belonging to the god. They are also called deva yoshita, i.e., prostitutes offered to the god. They have no caste of their own. They retain the name of the caste to which they originally belonged, such as Maráthe Bhávinis, Bhandári Bhávinis, Sutár Bhávinis, etc. The following account is given of the origin of the sect of Bhávinis. A woman wishing to abandon her husband goes to the temple of a village deity at night, and in presence of the people assembled in that temple she takes oil from the lamp burning in the temple, and pours it upon her head. This process is called Deval righanc, i.e., to enter into the service of the temple. After she has poured sweet oil from the lamp upon her head, she has no further connection with her husband.

She becomes the maid servant of the temple, and is free to behave as she likes. Daughters of such Bhávinis who do not wish to marry, undergo the process of shesa bharane, and follow the occupation of their mothers. The sons of the Bhávinis have an equal right to the property of their mother, but any daughter who marries a lawful husband loses her share in the property of her mother. A Devali follows the occupation of blowing the horn or cornet, and is entitled to hold the torches in the marriage ceremonies of the people in the village. Many of them learn the art of playing upon the tabour—mrudunga—and are useful to Kathekaris, i.e., those who recite legends of the gods with music and singing. Some of them become farmers while others are unoccupied.

Bhávinis follow the occupation of a maid-servant in the temple, but their real occupation is that of public women. They are not scorned by the public. On the contrary, they are required to be present at the time of a marriage to tie the marriage-string—Mangalsutra—of a bride, for they are supposed to enjoy perpetual unwidowhood—'Janma sunásini.' Some of the houses of Bhávinis become the favourite resorts of gamblers and vagabonds. In the absence of a daughter, a Bhávinis purchases a girl from a harlot, and adopts her as her daughter to carry on her profession.³

Snakes are believed to be the step-brothers of the gods. They reside under the earth and are very powerful. The snake is considered to be very beautiful among creeping animals, and is one of the ornaments of the god Shiva. An image of a snake made of brass is kept in the temple of the god Shiva, and worshipped daily along with the god. There is a custom among the Hindus of worshipping Nága, i.e., the cobra, once a year on the Nága panchami day, i.e., the fifth day of the bright half of Shrávan (August). Images of snakes are drawn with sandalpaste on a wooden board or on the walls of houses, and worshipped by Hindu women on this day. Durra grass, sacred to Gumpati, parched rice (lahya), legumes (kadada), and milk are offered to this image. Some people go to the snake's abode (Taral)—an ant-hill—on this day to worship the snake itself, if they happen to catch sight of it.¹

It is said that at Battisi Shiral in the Belgaum District the real Nāga comes out of its shade below the earth on this day, and is worshipped by the people. Milk and lahya, parched rice, are put outside the house at night on this day with the intention that they may be consumed by a snake. Hindus do not dig or plough the earth on Nāga panchami day. Even vegetables are not cut and fried on this day by some people.²

Earthen images of snakes are worshipped by some people in the Konkan districts on the Nāga panchami day. The Nāga is considered to be a Brahman by caste, and it is believed that the family of the person who kills a snake becomes extinct. The cobra being considered a Brahman, its dead body is adorned with the janame and then burnt as that of a human being. A copper coin is also thrown into its funeral pile.³

In certain villages in the Decan a big earthen image of a snake is consecrated in a public place on the Nāga panchami day, and worshipped by Hindus in general. Women sing their songs in circles before this image while men perform tamashās by its side. In fact, the day is enjoyed by the people as a holiday. The snake is removed next day, and an idol in the form of a man made of mud is seated in its place. This idol is called Shirdāshet, who is said once to have been a king and to have ruled over this earth for one and one-fourth of a ghatāka, i.e., for half an hour only. This day is observed as a day of rejoicing by the people.⁴

The names of the snake deities are Takshaka, Vasuki and Shesha. Their shrines are at Kolhapur, Nagothine, Prayaga, Nagdevachi Wadi and Subramanya. A great fair is held every year at Battisi Shiral on the Nāga panchami day.⁵

There is a shrine of a snake deity at Sasantwadi. The management of the shrine is in the hands of the State officials. It is believed that a real snake resides therein.⁶

There is a shrine of a snake deity at Awas in the Albag taluka of the Kolaba District, where a great fair is held every year on the 14th day of the bright half of Kartik (November). It is said that persons suffering from snakebites recover when taken in time to this temple.⁷

It is said that a covetous person who acquires great wealth during his life-time and dies without enjoying it, or without issue, becomes a snake after death and guards his buried treasures. At Kolhapur there was a Sankar—money-lender—named Kodulkar who is said to have become a snake, and to guard his treasures. In the village of Kailasa in the Panhal's petha of the Kolhapur District there is a snake in the house of a Kulkarni, who scares away those who try to enter the storehouse of the Kulkarni.⁸

It is a general belief among the Hindus that snakes guard treasures. It is said that there are certain places guarded by snakes in Goa territory. Persons who were compelled to abandon Portuguese territory owing to religious persecutions at the hands of the Portuguese buried their treasures beneath the ground. Those who died during exile are said to have become bhūts or ghosts, and it is believed that they guard their buried treasures in the form of snakes.⁹

The Hindus generally believe that the snakes who guard buried treasures do not allow any one to go near them. The snake frightens those who try to approach, but when he wishes begins to speak through the victim. The sorcerer enquires what the snake wants. The snake gives reasons for biting the person. When any thing thus asked for by the snake is offered, the victim comes to his senses, and is cured. There are many witnesses to the above fact.¹

At Mitbav in the Ratnagiri District chickens numbering from twenty to twenty-five are applied to the wound caused by the snakebite. A chicken has the power of drawing out the poison from the body through the wound, but this causes the death of the chicken. The remedy above described is sure to be successful if it is tried within three hours of the person being bitten. There are several other medicines which act on the snakebite, but they must be given very promptly. There are some men in this village who give charmed water for snake or any other bites. Many persons suffering from snakebite have been cured by the use of mantras and charmed water.²

Water from the tanks or Viharas in the Savantwadi State and Manyere in Goaterterritory is generally used as medicine for snakebite. It is believed that by the power of mantras a snake can be prevented from entering or leaving a particular area. This process is called 'sarpa bāndhane'. There are some sorcerers who can draw snakes out of their holes by the use of their mantras, and carry them away without touching them with their hands.³

At Adisare, in the Rajapur taluka, roots of certain herbs are mixed in water and applied to the wound caused by the snakebite, and given to the sufferer to drink.⁴

At Naringre in the Ratnagiri District, persons suffering from snakebite are given the juice of Kadalim's leaves, and are kept in the temple of Hanuman. The feet of the deity are washed with holy water, and the water is given to the victim to drink.⁵

A snake is believed to have a white jewel or mani in its head, and it loses its life when this jewel is removed. This jewel has the power of drawing out the poison of snakebite. When it is applied to the wound it becomes green but when kept in milk for sometime, it loses its greenness and reverts to its usual white colour. It gives out to the milk all the poison that has been absorbed from the wound and the milk becomes green. This jewel can be used several times as an absorbent of the poison of snakebite. The green milk must be buried under ground, so that it may not be used again by any one else.⁶

It is believed that an old snake having long hair on its body has a jewel in its head. This jewel is compared with the colours of a rainbow. The snake can take this jewel from its head at night, and search for food in its lustre. Such snakes never come near the habitation of human beings, but always reside in the depth of the jungle. This species of snake is called Deva Sarpa, i.e., a snake belonging to a deity. It is related that a snake was born of a woman in the Ankur's house at Tardal in the Sangli State, and another one in the Gabale's house at Kolhāpur.⁷

CHAPTER VIII.

TOTEMISM AND FETISHISM.

The worship of totems, or Devaks, prevails among Hindus in Western India. The term Devak is applied to the deity or deities worshipped at the beginning of a thread or a marriage ceremony. The ceremony is as follows: A small quantity of rice is put into a winnowing fan, and with it six small sticks of the Umbar tree, each covered with mango leaves and cotton thread. These are worshipped as deities. Near the winnowing fan is kept an earthen or copper vessel filled with rice, turmeric, red powder, betelnuts, sweet balls made of wheat flour, ghi and sugar; and on the top of the vessel is a small sprig of mango and a cocoanut covered with cotton thread. This vessel is also worshipped as a deity, and offerings of sweet eatables are made to it. After the worship of this vessel, the regular ceremony of Punyāhavachana is performed. Twenty-seven Mātrikās, or village and local deities, represented by betelnuts are consecrated in a new winnowing fan or a bamboo basket. Seven Mātrikās are made of mango leaves, six of which contain durva grass, and the seventh darbhā grass. Each of them is bound with a raw cotton thread separately. They are worshipped along with a Kalasha or a copper lota as mentioned above. This copper lota is filled with rice, betelnuts, turmeric, etc., a sprig of mango leaves is placed on the lota, and a cocoanut is put over it. The lota is also bound with a cotton thread. Sandalpaste, rice, flowers, and durva grass are required for its worship. An oil lamp called Arati is waved round the devak, the parents, and the boy or the girl whose thread or marriage ceremony is to be performed. A Śuvāsini is called and requested to wave this Arati, and the silver coin which is put into the Arati by the parents is taken by her. The father takes the winnowing fan and the mother takes the Kalasha, and they are carried from the mandap to the devak consecrated in the house. A lighted lamp is kept continually burning near this devak till the completion of the ceremony. After completion of the thread or marriage ceremony the devak is again worshipped, and the ceremony comes to an end. The deity in the devak is requested to depart on the second or the fourth day from the date of its consecration. No mourning is observed during the period the devak remains installed in the house.

Among Marāthās and many of the lower classes in the Ratnāgiri District the branch of a ʿad, Kadamba, mango, or an Apta tree is worshipped as their devak or kul.¹

Some Marāthās have a sword or a dagger as their devak, which is worshipped by them before commencing the ritual of the marriage ceremony.²

The family known as Rāne at Nāringre in the Davagad taluka of the Ratnāgiri District, and the families known as Gadakari and Jādhava at Māilwan, consider the ʿad or Banian tree as their devak, and do not make use of its leaves. In the same manner, some people consider the Kadamba tree sacred to their family.³

There are some people among the Hindus in Western India whose surnames are derived from the names of animals and plants, such as Boke, Lāndage, Wāgh, Dukre, Kāvale, Garud More, Mhase, Rede, Keer, Popat, Ghode, Shelār, Gāyatonde, Wāghmare, Shālunke, Bhende, Padwal, Wālke, Apte, Ambekar, Pimpalkhare, Kelkar and Kālke.

The Hindus believe that a cow, a horse, and an elephant are sacred animals. The cow is treated with special respect by the Hindus in general, and the bull by the Langayats and others. The milk, the urine, and the dung of a cow are used as medicines, and they are also given as offerings to the god in sacrifices.

The Shelar family considers the sheep as their derah, and they do not eat the flesh of a sheep. The Shalunke family respects the Shalunke or sparrow. People belonging to the More family do not eat the flesh of a peacock as they consider it to be their derah.¹

The Pandaris whose surname is Padwal do not eat the vegetable of a snake-gourd or Padwal.²

Hindus do not eat the flesh of the animal respected by them, and those who offer any fruit to their guru as a token of respect do not eat that fruit in future. Some Hindus do not eat onions, garlic and the fruit of a palm tree. The fruit of a tree believed to be the derah of a family is not eaten by the members of that family.

The families of Ravi and Rane do not take their food on the leaf of a Tad or Banana tree as they consider it to be their derah.³

There are some Hindu families in the Kolaba District who believe that their kul or totem consists of the tortoise and the goat, and they do not eat the flesh of such animals. A certain community of the Vashyas or traders known as Bwar believe that a jack tree or Phanas is their kul, and they do not use the leaves of that tree.⁴

It is believed among the Hindus that the deity Santids protects children for the first three months from their birth. The deity is worshipped on the fifth day from the birth of a child, and if there occurs any omission or error in the worship of that deity, the child begins to cry, or does not keep good health. On such occasions the parents of the child make certain vows to the deity, and if the child recovers, the parents go to a jungle, and collect seven small stones. They then besmear

the stones with red lead and oil, and worship them along with a she goat in the manner in which the vow was promised to be fulfilled.⁵

The horse is connected with the worship of the god Khandoba because this animal is sacred to that deity being his favourite vehicle. For this reason all the devotees or Bhakts of Khandoba take care to worship the horse in order that its master, the god Khandoba, may be pleased with them.

It is well known that the cow is considered as most sacred of all the animals by the Hindus, and the reason assigned for this special veneration is that all the deities dwell in the cow.

The Nandi, or a bull made of stone consecrated in front of the temple of Shiva the Lagh or a tiger at the temple of a god less and cows and dogs in the temple of Dattatraya are worshipped by the Hindus.

The mouse, being the vehicle of Ganpati the god of wisdom, is worshipped by the people along with that god.

In the Konkan cattle are worshipped by the Hindus on the first day of Kartika, and they are made to pass over fire.

The mountains having caves and temples of deities are generally worshipped by the Hindus. The Alucha Pahad, the Gimur, the Panchmadi, the Brahmagiri, the Sahyadri, the Lungar, the Juandela dongar, the Manja dongar at Jannar, the Tugabela dongar, the Gnesh Lene, and the Shivabai are the principal holy mountains in the Bombay Presidency.

Mount Abu, known as the Abucha Pahad is believed to be very sacred, and many Hindus go on a pilgrimage to that mountain.

Hills are worshipped at Ganpati Pule and Chaul. At Pule there is a temple of the god Ganpati, the son of Shiva and at Chaul in the Kolaba District there is a temple of the god Dattatraya.

The place which produces sound when water is poured over it is considered to be holy, and is worshipped by the people.

In the Deccan, hills are worshipped by the people on the Narak chaturdashi day in Dipawāli, 14th day of the dark half of Ashwin (October). The legend of this worship is that the god Shri Krishna lifted the Govardhan mountain on this day, and protected the people of this world. A hill made of cowdung is worshipped at every house on the Narak chaturdashi day.¹

Stones of certain kinds are first considered as one of the deities, or as one of the chief heroes in the family, and then worshipped by the people. Many such stones are found worshipped in the vicinity of any temple.

A stone coming out of the earth with a phallus or lingam of Shiva is worshipped by the Hindus. If such a lingam lies in a deep jungle, it is worshipped by them at least once a year, and daily, if practicable, in the month of Adhikamās, an intercalary month which comes every third year.²

The red stones found in the Narmada river represent the god Ganpati, and are worshipped by the people.

A big stone at Phutaka Tembha near Murud in the Ratnágiri District is worshipped by the people, who believe it to be the monkey god Hanumán or Māruti. All the stone images of gods that are called Snayambhu or self-existent are nothing but rough stones of peculiar shapes. There are such swayambhu—natural-images—at Kelshi and Kolthare in the Ratnágiri District.³

There is a big stone at Palshet in the Ratnágiri District which is worshipped as Kālikādevi.⁴

Stones are sometimes worshipped by the people in the belief that they are haunted by evil spirits. We have for example a stoen called Mora Dhonda lying by the seashore at Málwan in the Ratnágiri District. It is supposed to be haunted by Devachār.⁵

The stones which are once consecrated and worshipped as deities have to be continually worshipped, even when perforated. The small, round, white stone slab known as Vishnu pada, which is naturally perforated, is considered to be holy, and is worshipped daily by the Hindus along with the other images of gods. The holes in this slab do not extend right through.⁶

It is considered inauspicious to worship the fractured images of gods, but the perforated black stone called Shāligrām, taken from the Gandaki river, is considered very holy, and worshipped by the people. For it is believed to be perforated from its very beginning. Every Shāligrām has a hole in it, even when it is in the river.⁷

Broken stones are not worshipped by the people. But the household gods of the Bráhmans and other higher classes which are called the Pancháyatan—a collection of five gods—generally consist of five stones with holes in them.⁸

No instances of human sacrifices occur in India in these days, but there are many practices and customs which appear to be the survivals of human sacrifices. These survivals are visible in the offerings of fowls, goats, buffaloes, and fruits like cocoanuts, brinjals, the Kohále or pumpkin gourd and others.

Human sacrifices are not practised in these days, but among the Karháda Bráhmans there is a practice of giving poison to animals in order to satisfy their family deity. It is said that they used to kill a Bráhman by giving him poisoned food.

It is believed that the people belonging to the caste of Karháda Bráhmans used to offer human sacrifices to their deity, and therefore nobody relies on a Karháda Bráhman in these days. There is a proverb in Marathi which means that a man can trust even a Kassai or a butcher but not a Karhada.

As they cannot offer human sacrifices in these days, it is said that during the Navaratra holidays, i.e., the first nine days of the bright half of Ashwin (October), they offer poisoned food to crows, dogs and other animals.¹

At Kalshe in the Malwan taluka of the Ratnagiri District, the servants of gods, i.e., the ministrants or the Bhopis of the temple prick their breast with a knife on the Dasara day, and cry out loudly the words 'Koya 'Koya'. No blood comes from the breast as the wound is slight. This appears to be a survival of human sacrifice.²

In the Bombay Presidency and more especially in the Konkan districts, fetish stones are generally worshipped for the purpose of averting evil and curing diseases. In every village stones are found sacred to spirit deities like Baharobi, Chedobi, Khan-dibi, Wharobi, Zoting Vetal, Jakkhas, Kokai, Kalkai and others. The low class people such as Mahars, Mangs, etc., apply red lead and oil to stones, and call them by one of the above names, and ignorant people are very much afraid of such deities. They believe that such deities have control over all the evil spirits or ghosts. It is said that the spirit Vetal starts to take a round in a village on the night of the moon on day of every month, accompanied by all the ghosts. When any epidemic prevails in a village, people offer to these fetish stones offerings of eatables, coconuts, fowls and goats.

There is a stone deity named Bhavai at Kohivare in the Barwad State, to whom vows are made by the people to cure diseases. As the duty is in the burning ground it is naturally believed that this is the abode of spirits.³

At Achare, in the Malwan taluka of the Ratnagiri District, the round stones known as Ashetrapal are supposed to possess the power of curing diseases, and are also believed to be the abode of spirits.⁴

At Adhvare, in the Ratnagiri District, there is a stone named Mahar Purukha which is worshipped by the people when cattle disease prevails, especially the disease of a large tick or the cattle or dog louse.⁵

At Ubhadandi, in the Ratnagiri District there are some stones which are believed to be haunted by Vetal Bhutat Rawl Wath and such other servants of the god Shiva, and it is supposed that they have the power of curing epidemic diseases. People make vows to these stones when any disease prevails in the locality.⁶

The Hindus generally consider as sacred all objects that are the means of their livelihood, and for this reason the oil mill is worshipped. The Beahmans hold in veneration the sacred thread—Ladnapari,—and religious books the goldsmiths consider their firepots as sacred and do not touch them with their feet. In case any one accidentally happens to touch them with his foot he apologises and bows to them.

It is believed by the Hindus that the broom, the winnowing fan, the payali—a measure of four shers, the Samat or sweet-oil lamp, a metal vessel, fire and Sahan or the levigating slab should not be touched with foot.

The metals gold, silver, and copper, the King's coins, jewels and pearls, corals, the Shaligram stone, the Ganpati stone from the Narmada river, conch shell, sacred ashes, elephant tusks, the horns of a wild ox (Gara), tiger skin, deer skin, milk, curds, ghee, cow's urine, Bel, basil leaves or Tula, coconuts, betelnuts, and flowers are considered as sacred by the Hindus and no one will dare to touch them with his foot.

Hindus worship annually on the Dasara day the arms and all the instruments or implements by which they earn their livelihood. The corn sieve, the winnowing basket, the broom, the rice-pounder, the plough, the Amuta or wood bill, and other such implements are worshipped on this day. The agriculturists respect their winnowing fans and corn sieves, and do not touch them with their feet.

In the Kolhápúr District all the instruments and implements are worshipped by the people one day previous to the Dasara holiday. This worship is called Khándeputan. They also worship all agricultural instruments, and tie to them leaves of Pipal and mango trees.¹

A new winnowing fan is considered to be holy by the Hindus. It is filled with rice, fruits, cocoanuts and betelnuts, and a Khana—a piece of bodicecloth—is spread over it. It is then worshipped and given to a Bráhmaṇ lady in fulfilment of certain vows, or on the occasion of the worship of a Bráhmaṇ Dampatya or married pair.

The broom is considered to be holy by the Hindus. Red powder—Kunku—is applied to a new broom before it is taken into use. It should not be touched with the feet.

At Rewadanda, in the Kolába District, some people worship a wood-bill or Koyata on the 6th day from the birth of a child. The rice-pounder, or Musal, is worshipped by them as a devak at the time of thread and marriage ceremonies.²

Fire is considered to be holy among the high class Hindus. It is considered as an angel that conveys the sacrificial offerings from this earth to the gods in heaven. It is considered as one of the Hindu deities, and worshipped daily by high class Hindus. A Bráhmaṇ has to worship the fire every day in connection with the ceremony Vaishradeva—oblations of boiled rice and ghi given to the fire. It is also worshipped by the Hindus on special religious occasions.

Fire is worshipped at the time of Yadnas or Sacrifices. Sacrifices are of five kinds. They are—

Devayadna, Bhutayadna or Brahmayadna, Rishiyadna or Atithiyadna, Pitruyadna and Mannshyayadna. The offerings of rice, ghi, firewood, Til or sesamum, Java or barley, etc., are made in these yadnas. It is also worshipped at the time of Shrávani or Upákarma—the ceremony of renewing the sacred thread annually in the month of Shrávan.³

Among the lower classes fire is worshipped on the Mahálaya or Shráddha day. They throw oblations of food into the fire on that day.

The fire produced by rubbing sticks of the Pipal or Shevari tree is considered sacred, and it is essentially necessary that the sacred fire required for the Agnihotra rites should be produced in the manner described above.

Agnihotra is a perpetual sacred fire preserved in Agnikunda,—a hole in the ground for receiving and preserving consecrated fire. A Bráhmaṇ, who has to accept the Agnihotra, has to preserve in his house the sacred fire day and night after his thread ceremony, and to worship it three times a day after taking his bath. When an Agnihotri dies, his body is burnt by the people who prepare fire by rubbing sticks of Pipal wood together.⁴

There are some Bráhmaṇs who keep the fire continuously burning in their houses only for Cháturmás or four months of the year. The fire which is preserved and worshipped for four months is called "Smárta Agni."⁵

CHAPTER IX.

ANIMAL WORSHIP.

The following animals, birds and insects are respected by the Hindus —The cow, bullock, she-buffalo, horse, elephant, tiger, deer, mouse, goat, ants and alligators, and among the birds the following are held sacred —Peacock, swan, eagle and kohit or cuckoo.

Of all the animals the cow is considered to be the most sacred by Hindus. It is generally worshipped daily in the morning for the whole year, or at least for the Chaturmas or four months beginning from the 11th day of the bright half of Ashadha to the 11th day of the bright half of the month of Kartika, and a special worship is offered to it in the evening on the 12th day of the dark half of Ashwin (October).

The cow is believed to be the abode of all the deities and rishis. It is compared with the earth in its sacredness and it is considered that when it is pleased it is capable of giving everything required for the maintenance of mankind, and for this reason it is styled the Kadma Dhenu or the giver of desired objects. It is said that a person who walks round the cow at the time of its delivery obtains the punya or merit of going round the whole earth. The cow is even worshipped by the god Vishnu.

The cow is considered next to a mother as little children and the people in general are fed by the milk of a cow. Some women among high class Hindus take a vow not to take their meals before worshipping the cow, and when the cow is not available for worship they draw in turmeric white or red powder the cow's foot prints and worship the same. At the completion of the vow it is worshipped, and then given as a gift to a Brahman. It is considered very meritorious to give a Gopra lan—a gift of a cow along with its calf to a Brahman. The sight of a cow in the morning is believed by all Hindus to be auspicious.

The bullock is respected by the people as it is the favourite vehicle of the god Shiva and is very useful for agricultural purposes. The Nandi or bull is worshipped by Hindus. The bullock is specially worshipped on the 12th day of the bright half of Kartika. When performing the funeral rites of the dead a bull is worshipped and set free. The bull thus set free is considered sacred by the people, and is never used again for agricultural or any other domestic purposes.

In order to avoid calamities arising from the influence of inauspicious planets Hindus worship the she buffalo, and offer it as a gift to a Brahman. The she-buffalo is compared with the Kal Purusha or the god of Death, the reason being that Yama is believed to ride a buffalo. The Brahman who accepts this gift has to shave his moustaches and to undergo a certain penance. The cowherds sometimes worship the she-buffalo. As it is the vehicle of Yama, the buffalo is specially worshipped by people when an epidemic occurs in a village. In certain villages in the Konkan districts the buffalo is worshipped and sacrificed on the same day.

The horse is the vehicle of the deity Khandoba of Sejuri. It is worshipped on the Vijaya Dashami or the Dasara holiday as in former days, on the occasion of the horse sacrifice or Ishwamedha.

The elephant is the vehicle of the god Indra and is specially worshipped on the Dasara day. It is also believed that there are eight sacred her mouth when she is asleep. The only means to guard against her witchcraft is to remain on friendly terms with her, and not to hurt her feelings on any occasion.* People generally keep a watch over the actions of a woman who is suspected to be a witch, and if she is found practising her black art, and is caught red-handed, people then pour into her mouth water brought from the shoe-maker's earthen pot or lundli. It is believed that, when she is compelled to drink such water, her black art becomes ineffective.¹

In the Thina District it is believed that the skin round the eyes of a witch is always black, her eyes have an intoxicated appearance, her nails are generally pitched and have a darkish colour, and the lower portions of her feet seem to be scraped. When any sorcerer gives out the name of such a Bhutali, she is threatened by the people that, should she continue to give trouble in the village, her own black art or another spirit would be set against her; and she then ceases to give trouble.²

There are some sorcerers in the Thina District who can move a small brass cup or tâti by the power of their magic. They can detect a witch by the movement of this vessel. When the brass vessel or tâti reaches the house of a witch, it at once settles upon the witch's head. She is then threatened by the people that she will be driven out of the village if found practising her black art.³

In the Kolhapur District, when the people come to know of the existence of a witch in their village, they take special precautions at the time of harvest. They arrange to harvest a different kind of grain to the one selected for harvesting by the witch. After some time they go to the field of the witch, and discover whether there is a mixture of grain in her field. If they are convinced of the fact, they take further precautions. In order to avoid being troubled by the chetak, they keep an old, worn out shoe or sandal and a charmed copper amulet under the eaves at the main door of their houses, or make crosses with marking nut on both sides of a door. At some places chunari spots or circles are marked on the front of a house, the object being to guard against the evil effects of the chetak's tricks.⁴

CHAPTER XI.

GENERAL

Offerings of coconuts, fowls or goats are annually made to the spirits that guard the fields. They are generally made at the time of beginning a plantation or the harvesting of a crop. When making these offerings, the farmers pray to the god to give prosperous crops every year. They prepare their cooked food in the field on the first harvesting day and offer it as naivedya (god's meal) along with the above mentioned offerings.¹

At Bándirade in the Ratnágiri District, while commencing the sowing of crops the farmers worship a certain number of bullocks made of rice flour and then throw them into the pond or river adjoining the fields. On other occasions offerings of coconuts and fowls are sacrificed to the deities that protect the fields. Some people give a feast to the Brahmans at the end of the harvesting season.²

Ceremonies in connection with ploughing, etc., are not observed for all the lands. But fields which are supposed to be haunted by evil spirits are worshipped at the time of ploughing and the evil spirits are propitiated with coconuts, sugar, fowls or goats are offered to the local deities or devachars. There is a custom of worshipping in the fields the heaps of new corn at the time of harvest, and this custom generally prevails in almost all the Konkani districts.³

At Fonde in the Ratnágiri District the Shimar generally composed of boiled rice mixed with curds is kept at the corner of a field at the time of reaping the crops. The Shimar is sometimes composed of the offerings of fowls and goats.⁴ This ritual is also known by the name Charana.⁵

At Dásger in the Kolaba District, there is a custom of carrying an onion in the corn taken to the fields for sowing and placing five handfuls of corn on a piece of cloth before beginning to sow the corn. At the time of Larani or plantation of crops a fair called Palejatra is held by the people, and every farmer breaks a coconut in the field at the time of plantation or Larani of crops. At the time of harvesting it is customary with many of the cultivators in the Konkani to place a coconut in the field and to thresh it by the first bundle of crop several times before the regular operation of threshing is begun. At the close of the harvest the peasants offer coconuts, fowls or a goat to the guardian deity of the field.⁶

At Vadr in the Thana District the ploughs are worshipped by the farmers on Saturdays and then carried to the fields for ploughing. At the time of harvesting the wooden post to which the bullocks are tied is worshipped by them and at the close of the harvest the heap of new corn is worshipped and coconuts are broken over it.⁷

In the Kolhapur District the farmers worship the plough before beginning to plough the land. At the time of sowing the corn they worship the Kuri an implement for sowing corn. At the time of Ropani or transplanting the crops they split a coconut, and worship the stem consecrated by the side of the field after besmearing it with red powder and make a vow of sacrificing a goat for the prosperity of their crops. At the time of harvesting they also worship the heap of new corn and after giving to the deity offerings of coconuts, fowls or goats they carry the corn to their houses.⁸

In the Konkani districts the village deity is invoked to protect the cattle. People offer fowls and coconuts at the annual fair of a village deity, and request her to protect their cattle and crops. They have to offer a goat or buffalo to the deity every third year, and to hold annual fairs in her honour. The procession of bali is one of the measures adopted for averting cattle diseases.⁹

After the kindling of the Holi the people assembled there offer to the Holi a Naivedya (god's meal) of poli—a sweet cake made of Jagri, wheat flour and gram pulse. Cocoanuts from all the houses in the village are thrown into this sacred fire. Some of these cocoanuts are afterwards taken out of the sacred fire, cut into pieces, mixed with sugar and are distributed among the people assembled as prasád or favoured gift. Lower classes of Hindus offer a live goat to the Holi, take it out when it is half burnt and feast thereon.

On the night of the fullmoon day and the first day of the dark half of Fálgun, the people assembled at the Holi fire wander about the village, enter gardens and steal plantains, cocoanuts and other garden produce. Robbery of such things committed during these days is considered to be pardonable. Some people take advantage of this opportunity for taking revenge on their enemies in this respect.

The fire kindled at the Holi on the fullmoon day is kept constantly burning till the Rang-panchami day i. e., fifth day of the dark half of Fálgun. Next morning i. e., on the first day of the dark half of Fálgun, the people boil water over that fire and use it for the purpose of bathing. It is believed that water boiled on the sacred fire has the power of dispelling all the diseases from the body. People go on dancing in the village and sing songs for the next five days. They generally sing Lávanis, a kind of ballad, during this festival. Among these dancers a boy is dressed like a girl and is called Rádha. This Rádha has to dance at every house while the others repeat Lávanis.

The second day of the dark half of Fálgun is called Dhulvad or dust day when people start in procession through the village, and compel the males of every house to join the party. They thus go to the Holi fire and raise loud cries of obscene words throwing mud and ashes upon each other. They afterwards go to the river or a pond to take their bath at noon time and then return to their houses. The third day of the dark half is also spent like the previous one with a slight difference which is that cow dung is used instead of mud. This day is called Shenwad day. On the fourth day the Dhunda Rákshahasin (a demon goddess) is worshipped by the people, and the day is spent in making merry and singing obscene songs called Lávanis. The fifth day of the dark half is known as Rang-panchami day and is observed by the people in throwing coloured water upon each other. Water in which Kusumba and other colours are mixed is carried in large quantity on bullock carts through the streets of a city and sprinkled on the people passing through these streets. On this day the sacred fire of the Holi is extinguished by throwing coloured water over it. This water is also thrown upon the persons assembled at the Holi. The money collected as post during this period is utilised in feasting and drinking.

At Ibhrampur in the Ratnágiri District the image of cupid is seated in a palanquin and carried with music from the temple to the Holi ground. The palanquin is then placed on a certain spot. The place for thus depositing the image of the god is called Sáhán.¹ At Náringre there is a big stone called Holdav which is worshipped by the people before kindling the Holi fire.² After the kindling of the sacred fire the palanquin is lifted from the Sáhán, and turned round the Holi fire with great rejoicings. The palanquin is then carried through the village and is first taken to the house of a Mánkari, and then from house to house during the next five days. The inmates of the houses worship the deity in the palanquin and offer cocoanuts and other fruits and make certain vows. The palanquin is taken back to the temple on the fifth day of the dark half of Fálgun when on its way gulál or red powder is thrown over the image and on the people who accompany it.³

Among high class Hindus the thread girding ceremony of a boy is performed when he attains puberty. The girls are generally married at an early age, and when a girl attains puberty, sugar is distributed among the friends and relatives of her husband. She is then seated in a Makhar—a gaily dressed frame. Dishes of sweets which are brought by the girl's parents and the relatives of her husband are given to her for the first three days. She takes her bath on the fourth day accompanied by the playing of music and the beating of drums. Sweetmeats in dishes are brought by the relatives till the day of Rutushanti (the first bridal night). The Garbhadan or Rutushanti ceremony is one of the sixteen ceremonies that are required to be performed during the life of every Hindu. This ceremony is performed within the first sixteen days from the girl's attaining her puberty the 4th, 7th, 9th, 11th and the 13th being considered inauspicious for this purpose. While performing this ceremony the following three rites are required to be observed. They are Ganapati-pujan or the worship of the god Ganapati, Pankyahatichan or the special ceremony for invoking divine blessings and Vatagraha shanti the ceremony for propitiating the nine planets. The ritual of this ceremony is as follows—

The husband and the wife are seated side by side on wooden boards to perform the above three rites. The Kodali pujan or plantain tree worship is performed by the pair. The sacred fire or Homa is required to be kindled. The juice of the Durma grass is then poured into the right nostril of the bride by her husband. This is intended to expel all diseases from the body of the girl and to secure safe conception. They are then seated in a Makhar, and presents of clothes, ornaments etc., are made by the parents of the girl and other relatives. After this the husband fills the lip of the girl with rice, a coconut, five betelnuts, five dry dates, five almonds, five plantains and five pieces of turmeric. The girl is then carried to a temple accompanied by the playing of music. A grand feast is given to the friends and relatives at the close of this ceremony.

The Hindus generally make various kinds of vows in order to procure offspring or with some other such object, and fulfil them when they succeed in getting their desire. The following are the different kinds of vows made. They offer coconuts, sugar, plantains and other fruits, costly new dresses and ornaments to the deities, and give feasts to Brahmans.

Special ceremonies called Laghurudra and Maharudra in honour of Shiva the god of destruction are also performed. Sweetmeats such as pedhas etc. are offered to the gods in fulfilment of vows. Some people make vows to observe fasts, to feed Brahmans, and to distribute coins and clothes to the poor, while others hang torana wreaths of flowers and mango leaves—on the entrance of the temple, and hoist flags over it. Rich people erect new temples to different Hindu deities. Some observe fasts to propitiate the goddess Chandika and worship her during Navratra the first nine days of the bright half of Ashvin (October) and others offer fowls and goats to their favourite deities. Women make it a vow to walk round the dudumbar or Pipal tree and to distribute coconuts, sugar, jaggery, copper or silver equal to the weight of their children.

Vows are made by people with the object of securing health, wealth and children and other desired objects such as education etc. They are as follows—

Performing the worship of Shri Satva Narayan, offering clothes and ornaments to the temple deities, hanging bells, constructing a foot path or steps leading to the temple of the special deity. Vows are also made to obtain freedom from disease or such other calamities. When any person in the family becomes ill or when a sudden calamity befalls a family an elderly member of the family goes to the temple of a deity and makes certain vows according to his means, fulfilling them as soon as the calamity or disease has disappeared.¹

Vows are usually to perform acts of benevolence. These consist in distributing coconut mixed in sugar, giving feasts to Brahma priests, observing fasts on Saturday, Tuesday and Sunday, offering clothes and ornaments to deities, building new temples and guest houses (dharma-shalas), digging out new wells and in distributing clothes and food to the poor.²

At Khopoli in the Kolaba District, people who have no children or whose children die shortly after birth make a vow to the Satwadi deity whose temple is at a short distance from Khopoli. The vow is generally to bring the child to the darshana (sight) of the deity and
